Milk Drinking Increases In San Mateo County

That milk drinking is becoming more and more popular in San Mateo county is indicated by an increase in the daily distribution of bottled milk from 3572 gallons in April of 1927 to 4272 gallons in April of 1928. The nutritional value of good milk and its prime importance in the diet of all persons growing children, in particular, is now generally recognized by all, and through the influence of the public press and educational workers in the school, milk is coming to be appreciated more and more by the entire population.

A surprise milk scoring contest recently completed, reveals that San Mateo county maintains a score of 94.4 per cent figured on a volume basis. This score is one whole percent higher than that of the previous contest held several months ago.

Judges officiating in the county contest were H. E. Ball, Market Milk Specialist of the Department of Agriculture, and J. J. Garland, county milk inspector.

Results of the contest were as follows:

Grade A. Pasteurized Milk
Rated between 95 and 100%

Chester Kirby, a former resident of this city, was a visitor from San Francisco. His mother, Mrs. T. M. Cook, who is very well known here, is planning to leave shortly on a visit to relatives in Boston.

PUBLIC SCHOOL PROGRAM IS AN ENJOYABLE ONE

One of the most successful programs in the observance of Public Schools Week to be held here since that week was established nine years ago, was enjoyed by a large audience in the auditorium of the McKinley School Monday evening.

Public Schools Week was inaugurated originally by the Masonic Grand Lodge of California but soon became a community affair and is being observed by communities throughout the state during the week. The program for the meeting Monday was arranged by a committee consisting of A. M. Cuthbertson, chairman John Gill and Donald Bogie.

Dr. T. W. McQuarrie, president of the State Teachers' College in San Jose, was the principal speaker. Dr. MacQuarrie was an interesting and enjoyable talker and his address was listened to with interest by the adults and by the children present. A number of musical selections were also enjoyed during the program.

The program was as follows:

Song—Grammar School Chorus.
Miss Dorothy Bresse, directing
Flute Trio—
1. Serenata.
2. Danse des Mirlitons (Tschaikowsky.)
Francis Sumner, George Cawthron and Brandon Stanley
Accompanied by Mrs. Waterman at the piano
Song—Treble Clef of high school
1. "Dreaming Alone in the Twilight." (Moore)
2. "To the Wild Rose." (Edward McDowell)
Harp Solo by Virginia Klassen "Praire."
Introduction of subject and since the seats were installed. As Address—" Educational Development in California" by Dr. T W. MacQuarrie, president San Jose Teachers' College.
Song by high school male quartet composed of Eugene Bone, Frank Archibald, Norman Hollingsworth and Leslie Heald.
1. "Cornfield Melodies" by Gates
2. "The Little Old Garden" by Hewitt.
3. "Lucy Jim" by Lincoln Hall.

Following the program the public was invited to inspect the new school and meet the teachers. The auditorium has recently been completed, seats installed and drapes arranged for the stage and windows. This was the first function in the auditorium since the seats wereinstalled. As many had not seen the interior of the school, which was finished last winter, it was inspected with interest.

Play-ground equipment was installed in the McKinley school during the week. All the equipment has been sanctioned by the state educational authorities, and it is claimed that every piece will fulfill some function not alone in amusing the children during play periods, but will build them up physically and develop better health.

Sequoia Makes New Deabting League Record

Sequoia Union High School holds second place in the Peninsula Debating League as a result of the two debates last Thursday, when the Sequoia affirmative team won from Santa Cruz debators by a 2 to 1 decision and the negative lost, 2 to 1 to Los Gatos. This puts Sequoia higher than it has ever stood before in the debating league.

All the members of the first teams will graduate this year, but Mrs. Bess Balcomb,, coach, is training more students to fill their places. A practice debate with St. Joseph's high of San Jose, has been planned for the second teams of both schools on May 11 to give the coaches a line on next year's strength. The local representatives have not yet been dettermined.

Roosevelt Boys to Meet Millbrae Club Tomorrow

The second game for the Roosevelt Pioneer Club of Redwood City in the Y. M. C. A. Pioneer Baseball League will be held on Saturday morning at the San Mateo City Park diamond. Boys of the club will meet at the Methodist church corner at 9:15 a. m.

The club has been doing a lot of practicing during the past two weeks in the hopes that they will be able to spring a surprise on their opponents, the Marshalls this Saturday. The Marshalls of Millbrae won from the Buffalo Bills of Burlingame two weeks ago in a game which was doped to be won by the latter.

W. P. Netherton, president of the Federal Land Value Insurance Company of San Francisco, and formerly a well-known attorney and banker of Santa Cruz was a business visitor in this city yesterday.

City Growth is Meeting Topic

Local Men Attending City Planning Meet

City Attorney Albert Mansfield, Councilman D. R. Stafford, E. B Hinman, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce, Henry Witte and John Gill of the local planning commission, and City Engineer C. L. Dimmitt are attending a conference on city planning being held in Pasadena.

While in the south, Hinman will visit a number of chambers of commerce and will study methods used in other towns. He is particularly interested in the part played by the various chambers of commerce in the industrial growth of other towns.

County Fire Warden Talks to Service Club

Reforestation and the saving of forests by the prevention of fires were the topics of a talk given before the members of the Redwood City Exchange Club at its weekly meeting Tuesday. The speaker was Bert Werder, fire warden of this county. The program was in observation of the National Forest Week.

Two violin solos by Alfred Albertson, talented young musician of Sequoia Union High School orchestra, were enjoyed.

In keeping with the spirit of the week, the club arranged for having a tree planted on the grounds of the new McKinley school in this city.

The chairman of the meeting was Jack Poole. Two other speakers on the program were E. Kardos. state treasurer of the Exchange organization and W. Coffman, past president of the San Francisco club and now district governor. Both men are from San Francisco and spoke in regard to the state convention of Exchange clubs to be held in Fresno May 2, 3 and 4.

Captain James Logan Injured With Rifle

A high-powered rifle presented to Captain James Logan of the San Mateo County traffic squad resulted in a painful injury to that popular official Sunday. Captain Logan was practicing with the rifle in the hills near here Sunday. A shell jammed in the chamber, and while endeavoring to release it, Logan discharged the gun shooting himself in the arm.

Although painfully injured, Logan drove to this city and to the office of Dr. H. A. Clattenburg, where he was treated for the injury. He is now recovering rapidly.

Democrats Urged To Vote By Leader Here

Wm. Miller, the widely known political leader and president of the Al Smith-for-president club, urges all to come to the polls on next Tuesday and cast their ballot for the popular New York governor, whose nomination at the Houston convention appears now to be an assured fact. Mr Miller wants to impress democrats that they must vote at the presidential primaries on Tuesday next to sho wtheir loyalty to the party and at the same time exercise exercise their perogative and do their duty as citizens. A big Democratic vote is looked for in the county by Mr. Miller at the Tuesday primary. He is certain that Al Smith will carry the county by a safe plurality over the other two candidates, Reed of Missouri, and Walsh of Montana.

Nature Plays Trick On Calf at Colma

Mathew Callan, the wealthy stockman and political leader of Colma, reports the presence of a freak among his herd. On Tuesday last one of his prize cows gave birth to a calf having five legs. The calf is healthy and will live, although throughout life it will be burdened with the extra limb, which is of no use and will be cumbersome to the unfortunate animal that accept the responsibility placed upon it by Old Mother Nature at times becomes capricious, queer and whimsical. But why the old lady should wish the extra leg upon the poor calf is beyond the mind of man.

Callan says he has in his time handled and cared for over ten thousand head of cattle and this is the first time that such a freak came within his notice.

The numerous friends of Mrs. Ella Sullivan will be pleased to learn that she is recovering from her recent illness and will soon leave the Community hospital, where she has been confined for the past three months.

Highway District Commissioners Decide Basis of Road Payments

AGREEMENT ON TRI-COUNTY ROAD PLAN REACHED

San Francisco County To Assume Large Part Of Burden

A further advance in the plans for the proposed $5,300,000 coast-side highway from San Francisco to Santa Cruz was made Wednesday when representatives from Santa Cruz, San Mateo and San Francisco counties met in the city hall in San Francisco and arrived at a tentative agreement as to the proportion of the cost to be borne by each of the three counties involved.

The tentative agreement will place 55% of the cost upon San Francisco, 15% upon Santa Cruz county and 30% upon this county. The original proportion proposed was 50, 30 and 20 per cent for San Francisco, San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties, respectively. But at a meeting held in Santa Cruz on Monday, the Santa Cruz representatives stated that their county could pay no more than 15 per cent of the cost.

The decision followed upon a conclusion by the county board of supervisors that due to the heavy outstanding indebtedness of Santa Cruz county for roadwork now underway that that county counld not meet the 70% assessment. The meeting in San Francisco Wednesday was called to arrive at a new arrangement and prevent the complete abandonment of the project.

George H. Rostron, Santa Cruz director of the district, outlined the situation at Wednesday's session. He declared officials down the peninsula are of the opinion that San Francisco should bear the heaviest burden of cost in view of the assessed valuations of properties within its boundaries, as compared to the other two counties. Increased benefits from use of the highway will also accrue to motorists of San Francisco, he said.

Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher of San Francisco, president of the highway district, after discussing plans with engineers from the three counties and with Supervisor John W. Poole of San Mateo county, stated the new allocation of ependitures will be recommended to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors for approval at the earliest possible meeting. The San Mateo supervisoral body has not yet voted approval to the plan.

"San Francisco desires to play fair with the other two counties and this seems to be reasonable due to terrific expenses to be borne by Santa Cruz county for roads," Gallagher said. "The highway will not be constructed for a number of years, but it surely is one of the hopes of the community or another outlet. We must face a situation of this sort in a spirit of utmost friendliness in order that the project may become eventually an accomplished fact."

The line of the new scenic boulevard was outlined to the district by Assistant City Engineer Clyde E. Healy and Engineer George A Kneese of this county. The road will follow partially the tracks of the old Ocean Shore Railroad and will branch off the great highway south of Lake Merced.

San Mateo county was represented at the conference by John W. Poole, chairman of the board of supervisors and by County Engineer George Kneese.

Suit On File Here Results From Crash

A suit was on file in the office of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese this week as the result of a crash which occured on the highway, near Broadway in this city on January 14, and which resulted in the death of Urban Hannigan of San Francisco. The plaintiff in the action is Miss Nora Irwin, a telephone operator of San Francisco.

Miss Irwin and several others was riding in a car driven by Edward O. Miller of San Francisco. The car collided near Broadway with a bus of the Peninsula Rapid Transit Company and was completely wrecked. L. A. Azevedo, driver of the bus, was exonorated of all responsibility in the wreck by a coronor's jury which sat in the case of Urban Hannigan, another of Miller's passengers.

The defendants in the present action are Miller and the transit company. The plaintiff asks $1,619.30 as hospital expenses and $50,000 damages as the result of injuries alleged to have been received.

Starting Campaign Here To Elect Alfred Smith

Mrs. Cecelia Casserly of Burlingame, a candidate as delegate to the Democratic convention at Houston, Texas, and one who is working for the candidacy of Governor Al Smith of New York, as president, was here Monday with Judge J. J. McGrath of San Mateo. The two prominent democrats were worikng in the interest of Mrs. Casserly and also advertising a mass meeting to be held in San Mateo tonight to boost the Smith candidacy. Governor Nellie T. Ross of Wyoming and Sylvster Andriano of San Francisco will be the principal speakers.

Charge Reduced When O'Connor Pleads Guilty

Jack O'Connor, San Francisco taxi cab driver who was returned by the sheriff's office from Arizona and held on a charge of assault to commit murder, entered a plea of guilty of assault to do great bodily harm. The original charge and the charge of robbery were dropped at the request of Maxwell McNutt, attorney for the defendant and the assent of District Attorney Swart The charge of which O'Connor entered a plea carries with it maximum sentence of 10 years either in the county jail or in the penitentiary.

Following O'Connor's plea of guilty, McNutt asked that he be granted probation. This was referred to Probation Officer Francis Rapp.

O'Connor was charged with having assaulted W. R. Brooks, mining man of Downieville, at Tanforan. Brooks was riding in O'Connor's taxi with a woman known as Elizabeth Saunders, who was convicted of complicity in the assault and robbery, and who is now serving a term in San Quentin. Miss Saunders was arrested in San Francisco immediately after the attack upon Brooks but O'Connor escaped and has been searched for for two years

County Music On the Radio

County Program Planned For San Jose Broadcast

A rogram prepared under the auspices of the San Mateo county chamber of commerce will be broadcast at 9 o'clock Monday evening over radio station K Q W in San Jose. The program will consist of numbers from the various communities of the county.

Redwood City will be represented by two numbers, one a quartet consisting of Frank Archibald, Eugene Bone, Lesle Heald and Norman Hollingsworth, accompanied by O. M. Carrington; the other a vocal solo by Miss Florence Rue, a student in the San Jose Teachers' College from this city.

San Francisco Kiwanians Give Progam at Club

Boy Scouting was the topic of an interesting program arranged for the Redwood City Kiwanis Club members of San Francisco club Wednesday. The meeting was attended by about 25 members of the San Francisco club, who provided an interesting and inspiring program.

Jim Trevorrow acted as the chairman of the meeting and introduced the speaker, Raymond Hansen, executive secretary of Boy Scouts of the San Francisco district. Hansen spoke on the aims of the Boy Scouts and of the influence of proper training on juvenile delinquency.

In addition to the speaker and chairman of the meeting the San Franciscoans provided special musical numbers by four members of the Boy Scouts in San Francisco. Several instrumental numbers were rendered by a trio consisting of Elmer Warra, Walter Williams and Stanley Owen while Julian Solomon sang several solos.

Funeral Services Today For Mrs. John Peterson

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon for Mrs. John A. Peterson of this city, who passed away Tuesday following a brief illness. Services will be in the chapel of the Layng & Tinney funeral parlors on Washington street and will be conducted by Rev. E. F. Hamby of the Baptist church. Interment will be in Union cemetery.

Mrs. Peterson is the wife of John A. Peterson and was quite widly known here. She is survived by her husband and by two children 5 and 7 years of age.

Promotion Association Holds Weekly Meeting

The regular weekly meeting of the Redwood City Promotion Association took place Wednesday evening at the Intermediate school on Broadway. Reports of the various committees were very encouraging. Rev. Currie addressed the meeting in behalf of the cross which is to erected on Emerald Peak and stated that splendid progress is being made. He urged the members to contribute their dollar donation as he desired this organization to be rated 100 per cent in this worthy cause.

C. D. Hall, editor of the Redwood City Tribune, also made a very interesting talk along the lines of newspaper work which was enjoyed by all. The association decided to give a Whist Party on Saturday, May 12, and many valuable prizes will be given

The committee on parks reported that all arrangements are made for the planting of the tree at the McKinley school on Saturday afternoon, May 5, and the request was made that all members make an effort to take part in the ceremony.

Mr. McNee, secretary of the association, has been ordered to the Naval hospital for an operation, and expects to be absent about three weesk. Mr. Wolsberg has been selected to act in his place.

After the meeting was adjourned all seemed to enjoy the refreshments that were served, and before departing for the night, the members pledged themselves to bring at least one or two visitors with them for the next Wednesday night. A surprise in the form of a program is to be presented.

The Fraternal Aid Union contemplates giving a card party in Foresters' hall Tuesday afternoon, May 8, at 2:30 p. m. Good prizes will be given the winners of the game. A bevy of pretty girls will do the "punchin."

R. R. COMMISSION ENDORSES WATER PURCHASE

A reaffirmation of the proposed purchase by San Francisco of the Spring Valley Water Company was made public this week by the California Railroad Commission. The proposed price is $41,000,000. The letter to the board of supervisors of San Francisco county reads:

"Your resolution of April 16, 1928, requesting the present opinion of the California Railroad Commission on the proposed purchase by the City and County of San Francisco of the properties of the Spring Valley Water Company was today considered by the Commission.

"I am authorized to say that nothing has come to the attention of the Commission since the issuance of its report dated November 24, 1920, to alter or change the opinion therein expressed. Indeed, developments since the date of the Commission's previous expression lend added force to the conclusions ther set forth and this Commission is therefore pleased to reaffirm its former statement, both as to the fairness of the purchase price and the desirability of the acquisition of the Spring Valley System by San Francisco."

Yours very truly,
LEON O. WHITSELL,
President.

If the people of San Francisco vote favorably on the bonds for this purchase San Francisco will become the largest property owner in this county, a position now held by the Spring Valley Water Company. The holdings of that company in this county now total 25,000 acres. The company is also the largest taxpayer in this county. The Spring Valley Company, is also owner of 30,000 acres of Alameda county land.

Dewey Day Dance Planned May 1st.

On next Tuesday evening, May 1, (Dewey Day) the United Spanish War Veterans will give a dance at Foresters hall in Redwood City to honor the memory of one of our greatest heroes, Admiral George Dewey.

Admiral Dewey was born at Montpilier, Vermont, December 26, 1837; died at Washington, D. C., January 16, 1917. He graduated a distinguished cadet third from the head of the class of 1854 at the naval academy at Annapolis.

For his victory over the Spanish fleet at Manila the president and congress of the United States presented to Commodore Dewey a magnificent sword and raised him to the rank of admiral. Congress also enacted a law whereby Dewey was never to be placed on the retired list. Though long past the age of retirement, he was an active officer of the U. S. Navy at the time of his death.

For his sixty-two years of honest and faithful service, we the people of the United States owe to him a debt of gratitude that can never be paid. Come out on next uesday evening, May 1st, (Dewey Day) and assist the veterans in celebrating this anniversary. The hall will be decorated with flags of the U. S., Spain and the Phillippine Insurgents.

The committee in charge of the affair is composed of C. E. Shaffer, commander, E. B. Hinman, Senior Past Commander; J. Cashman, Senior Vice Commander, John H. Jones, Loreny Faulstick, Captain Waterman.

Tickets will be fifty cents and Hydenabers orchestra will furnish the music.

Unions Urged For Women Workers

To switch from government to private business, it is interesting to note that California's women workers are now being urged to unionize, or at least form co-operative organizations for their mutual benefit.

Sadie Goodman, a Los Angeles industrial worker, brought the suggestion to the fore during her stay in Sacramento this week with the declaration that women in industry are still in the "kitchen stage of mind."

By that she means that women workers show little interest in improving their working conditions mainly because they consider business a temporary venture with matrimony as their chief goal.

"Men are geeting ahead of women in the industries." says Mrs. Goodman, "because men cooperate, fight together for their mutual interests. They form unions and battle for better conditions. Women certainly must follow the same general program if they are to be successful in industrial pursuits."

It is the plan of the girls board of athletic control to make a trip tomorrow to Muir Woods. They will be accompanied by Miss Irene Bradley.

FOREIGNERS GLAD TO BE RECEIVED INTO CITIZENSHIP

THIRTY-EIGHT CITIZENS RECEIVED By U. S. A. HERE

Italians Lead the List Of Foreigners Seeking Citizenship

Thirty-eight aliens were received into the citizenship of the United States Tuesday in the court of Judge Geo. H. Buck, where they were examined by Naturalization Examiner Maxwell Lambe. Despite the manifestos of Mousilini, the Italians lead the list, 24 natives of that nation renouncing allegiance to their native land and accepting the duties and privileges of American citizens. France, England, Denmark, Ireland and Greece came next in order of representation, having two each, while Switzerland, Scotland, Czecho Slovakia and Austria each had one representative.

The new citizens and their places of nativity are as follows:

Redwood City—Louis Gambetta, Switzerland; Giacomo Canoveje, Italy; Peter Barbitta, Italy; Christine Berndtsen, Denmark; Jeannett Degliantoni, Italy.

Burlingame—Regmor Sorensen, Denmark; William Watt, Scotland Thomas Dunsmore, England.

San Mateo—Clemente Picasso, Italy; Katie Kurucz, Czecho Slavakia; Michael McDonnell, Ireland; George Brinkhurst, England John King, Ireland.

Colma—Athanasia Poulopoulos, Greece; Julia Pappas, Greece; Mary Nannini, Italy; Attiglio Guglielmetti, Italy; Tille Merlo, Italy;

South San Francisco—Charles Fracchia, France; Jacques Fracchia, France; Walda Maffei, Italy; Settino Maffei, Italy; Louis Yamnik, Austria; Adolph Corruccini, Italy; Giovanni Buffini, Italy; Emilia Martinelli, Italy; Colombo Landucci, Italy; Felice Resio, Italy; Vincenzo Lea, Italy; Marsilio Blondini, Italy; Mary Lombardi, Italy.

Montara—Angelo Nencetti, Italy
Daly City—Mary Segale, Italy
Menlo Park—Savio Francesce. Italy and Pancroazio Robbano, Italy.

Following the examination the members of Gen. Geo. S. Evans Post of the Woman's Relief Corps, as is their custom, presented a short patriotic program. John Gill, superintendent of schools of this city, was the principal speaker, and the members of the Corps presented each new citizen with a small American flag.

Sequoia Hopes For Baseball - Swimming Championships

Chances for two or more championships at Sequoia Union High School are bright. Coaches Don Bogie and James Eva have brought baseball and swimming teams along in fine shape and the boys are showing good stuff.

The 130-pound baseball team has lost only one game, that to San Jose, by a score of 6 to 3 and is leading the P.-A. L. with two wins and one defeat. Elsworth Hatley pitched good ball in the San Jose game, but luck was against him and the team lost.

The unlimiteds played a game against Palo Alto Wednesday. This team is showing well in the field but their bats do not contain basehits. They have lost two league games, both of these games with San Jose.

The Cherokee Paddlers defeated San Jose in all classes, Friday, Dick Harrington and Guss Terry starring for the Indians. The scores in the limited meet, Sequoia 46, San Jose, 41. As San Jose is conceded one of the strongest teams in the league, things look bright for the Cherokees.

Track season ended Monday with a defeat by Santa Clara in the lightweights, 119 to 111, due only to the absence of several Cherokee tracksters.

Tennis has been coming into the spotlight also. In the team trials H. Munday and W. Munday were chosen for the singles, while Sutton and Cline will represent the school in the doubles.

Mrs. Roger Lapham will return from Europe about May 10, and will join Mr. Lapham at their country place in Menlo Park, where they will spend the summer. Mrs. Lapham went abroad several weeks ago with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Lewis Lapham of New York.

German Transatlantic Monoplane, the Bremen

The Bremen is a Junkers monoplane of the commercial type, with wings full cantilever, a spread of 55 feet and a fuselage 35 feet long. It was not equipped with a radio. The engine is a single Junkers L-5, water cooled, with a maximum horsepower of 300 and a maximum speed of 130 miles an hour. The fuel consumption is fifteen to eighteen gallons of gasoline an hour. Baron von Huenefeld spent all his money and what he could borrow for the building of this plane.

Historic Gates That Are to Be Removed

The historic iron gates, more than a century old, which stand on West Executive avenue between the White House and the War department in Washington, are to be removed and presented to the Ohio Archeological and Historical society by the provisions of a bill passed by the house and senate. The Ohio society will use the gates at the Spelgal Grove State park.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

City and county school superintendents of California will meet at Del Monte October 1 to 6, according to word received from William John Cooper, State superintendent of public instruction.

The international council for educational progress is to be made a permanent organization. This was decided at a meeting of California educators gathered at Will C. Wood's office recently. Formed originally to entertain a delegation of visiting Mexican educators late this month, the organization may be extended to create an educational entente between this country and Mexico, in the opinion of Dr. C. N. Thomas, organizer of the movement.

In the comparatively short space of twenty-one years, California has reduced her infant mortality rate by 62 per cent. From a rate of 160 deaths for every 1,000 births in 1906, the rate has decreased with fair consistency to 62 per 1,000 last year—a new low record. Figures announced a few days ago by the State department of public health show that California has one of the lowest infant mortality rates in the entire United States, being ten deaths per thousand below the average for the entire United States.

The proposed $6,000,000 State Park bond issue to be used in acquiring park lands over the State and thereby reserving to future generations great natural beauties last week received the unanimous indorsement of a committee of the directors of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce. The action followed a special meeting at which Fred G. Stevenot, director of the State department of natural resources, and William E. Colby, chairman of the State park commission, stressed features of the project under which half of the purchase price of each park project must be raised from sources other than the State.

The Covered Wagon Babies' Club, whose membership comprises Californians who came to this State in the historic covered wagons of early days, will hold a meeting in Sacramento on September 9th. Word to this effect was received last week by L. W. Hayes, manager of the Sacramento Tourist and Convention Bureau, from Superior Judge J. C. Needham of Modesto, Stanislaus county, an officer of the club.

Calling upon the citizenry of California to observe American Forestry Week, April 22nd to 28th, Governor C. C. Young in a statement issued today, declared that the forests of the state are the bulwark against two major misfortunes—Winter floods and Summer aridity. "In California," said the Governor, "our entire water supply comes from the watersheds in our hills and mountains. If these are densely covered with brush or trees, much of the water of our Winter storms sinks into the ground and is conserved for Summer irrigation. But if that brush and forest is destroyed, nearly all of the water rushes directly into the streams, producing destructive floods in Winter, followed by shortage of water in the Summer when it is badly needed."

Two giant air beacons in widely separated portions of California flashed forth for the first time a few nights ago when Col. Charles Lindbergh pressed a telegraph key in Denver, Colo. One is situated at Mount Diablo and the other in the Merced Hills near Los Angeles. Lindbergh reached Lowry Field, Denver, in the afternoon in his monoplane from Grand Canyon, Ariz. The beacons were installed by the Standard Oil Company under the advice and supervision of the United States department of commerce. They are part of the marking of a network of national airways now in the process of delineation by the department.

California's lead in ownership of automobiles is apparently to be repeated with respect to airplanes, this State now ranking first in the nation in the number of aircraft given official recognition by the United States government. California's enthusiastic adoption of this mode of locomotion for all general business and pleasure purposes was enlarged upon in a review of Federal government figures released by the North American Bond and Mortgage Company of Los Angeles. According to this survey the State of New York is a poor second in the matter of flying. The survey report discloses that California has sixty-eight licensed machines, 134 identified and 254 numbered, as compared with New York's 118, 72 and 78, respectively. Next on the list comes Texas and then Illinois and Michigan. Two States, Vermont and New Hampshire, have only two commercial planes in use.

A "health roundup" of all children who will enter the first grade of public schools of this State next fall is being conducted by California Parent-Teachers associations in co-operation with the bureau of child hygiene, State department of public health.

The national forests of California last year drew more than 7,000,000 visitors, seekers of recreation and sports. This figure makes these forests as the leading recreational areas in the country. This is the announcement by the United States Forest Service.

Construction of the new machinery building at the California State Fair grounds was begun last week under an $89,112 contract awarded by the State Department of Public Works. The award went to Herndon & Finnigan, Sacramento contractors.

Campers of California are being urged to always take with them at least a day's supply of water for drinking purposes from a source known to be safe, in a bulletin issued by the State Board of Health. Otherwise camping for health may be anything but that.

The twenty-third international typewriting contest for professional, amateur and school champions from all parts of the United State and Canada will be held in Sacramento September 28 and 29, according to an announcement by Arthur S. Dudley, secretary-manager of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce. The twenty-two previous contests were held in New York City.

A revised study of California birds for use in California schools is being struck off at the State printing plant for immediate distribution. The booklet was prepared by Harold C. Bryant, head of the fish and game commission education and public information bureau, and Miss Gretchen L. Libby, with the latter writing teachers' helps for aid of the instructor.

The music supervisors of the United States a few days ago were invited by Governor Young to hold their 1930 session in California. In a telegram to George A. Bowen at Chicago, the chief executive urged that the educators come west and assured them a hearty welcome in this state. The governor's invitation was sent at the suggestion of California leaders in music education.

With the first official test of the California insanity law its outstanding case, the State Supreme Court will sit at Sacramento for three days, beginning May 8, with a calendar of forty-six cases to be disposed of. The constitutionality test of the new insanity law is wrapped up in appeals by William Edward Hickman, murderer of Marian Parker, Los Angeles school girl, and Joe Troche, North Sacramento, slayer of his sweetheart, from their death sentences.

The Rogers bill to authorize an appropriation of $15,000,000 for veterans' bureau hospital facilities was passed by the House last week. Veterans' bureau officials indicated their intention to allocate the appropriation to the following cities: Palo Alto, Cal., $240,000; American Lake, Wash., $220,000; Philadelphia, $3,000,000; Walla Walla, Wash., $250,000; Kansas City, Mo., $1,300,000; Tuscon, Ariz., $260,000, and Sheridan, Wyo., $100,000.

California's population for the last year was 5,398,457, an increase of 151,728 over 1926, according to the annual estimate of State Controller Ray I. Riley made public last week. Riley's figures are based on the assessed value of property for the year ending June 30, 1927, his theory being that there is a definite relation between increases in population and property values.

With the allotment of $335,000 last week under the War Department appropriation of March 23 for deepening the San Joaquin river the city of Stockton will at once put upon equal amount towards financing the project. By July 1 actual digging of the 24-foot channel from Stockton to the sea will begin. Stockton has voted $3,000,000 towards the Ship Canal project.

A sharp decrease in the number of motor accidents to children in the vicinity of school houses in the rural districts of California resulting from the junior traffic reserve system established a few months ago, was reported by the division of motor vehicles. While complete figures on accidents for the first three months of the year are still unavailable, division officials said early returns indicated that the toll in killed and injured over last year had been reduced more than one-third. The junior traffic patrol and the rigid enforcement by traffic officers of the law prohibiting driving past school houses at a speed in excess of fifteen miles an hour were held responsible.

Industrial accidents in California increased from 500 to 800 a day during the last four years, and Will J. French, State director of industrial relations, now predicts it will not be long before the toll reaches 1,000 a day. California's rapidly increasing population was held to be the foremost reason for the increase in injuries, as more workers have been thrown into industry, which also has been widely extended during recent years. An apparent lessening of safety activities also has contributed to the gain.

Governor C. C. Young is killing two birds with one stone in giving consideration to the appointment of three members of the State board of agriculture. The terms of Fred H. Bixley of Long Beach, W. H. Brooks of El Cerrito and Sam H. Green of San Francisco have expired. In addition to determining whether the three incumbents should be reappointed, Governor Young is giving thought to the suggestion that the board of agriculture, whose duty it is to conduct the annual California State Fair, be made a unit of the state department of agriculture. By making the board a division of the department of agriculture, its activities would be definitely co-ordinated with those of the department and it would have direct contact with the governor's council.

An increase of $39,019,903 in the bonded indebtedness of California and its cities and counties during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, was reported last week by State Controller Ray L. Riley. The total indebtedness of the three governmental divisions was $711,186,104.09, compared with $672,166,200.22 the preceding year. More than $20,000,000 of the increase was recorded by cities, $14,171,010 by the counties and only $1,458,000 by the State. The city bonded debt total last year stood at $329,844,041.04, as against $309,453,146.44 the preceding year.

The highways must be rid of the drunken driver, Frank G. Snook, state motor vehicle chief, declared a few days ago. He made public the work of the department in carrying out this edict. In the first three months of this year eighty persons lost their driving licenses because of drunkenness. Snook urges all state traffic officials to keep up their relentless drive against intoxicated drivers. "Take no chances with any person who has obviously been drinking," he declares to the officers. "The intoxicated driver is the most dangerous person on the highways today."

POULTRY FACTS

MEAT SCRAPS OR MILK IN RATION

Home-grown feeds should be used as much as possible in the ration of the farm flock, but grain feeds should be balanced with milk or meat scraps or both, says George Ghostley, poultry specialist of the agricultural extension service of the University of Minnesota. Ground feed called mash, as well as grain, is necessary. The following will give good results, he says:

Grain—Cracked yellow corn, two parts; wheat, one part, and heavy oats a half part.

Mash—One hundred parts each of bran, middlings, ground yellow corn, ground oats, and meat scrap, three parts each of salt and charcoal.

Milk is an extremely valuable food for poultry—more valuable even than for hogs. Feed skim milk or buttermilk if possible. Reduce the meat scrap one-half if there is milk before the birds all the time. If they have milk only to drink the meat scrap can be scrapped entirely, particularly if 5 per cent more bonemeal is added to the mash.

One pint of cod liver oil to each hundred pounds of mash, mixed first with charcoal and then with the other ingredients, makes a valuable addition to the ration. The mash should be before the hens in hoppers or feeders all the time. More grain than mash should be fed during the cold weather with the reverse the case in summer. Feed lightly of grain in the morning.

Warm water, oyster shell, grit and green or succulent feed such as alfalfa or clover leaves, mangels, carrots, cabbage, cull potatoes, rutabagas or sprouted oats should be furnished. Changes should be made gradually.

White Hollands From Original Wild Turkey

White Hollands are thought to have originated from sports of the original wild turkeys, and perpetuated by selection and breeding. In fact, some information leads to the belief that the White Hollands were perfected in Europe, where range was restricted and nomadic habits most desirable, and then later returned to America by some of the early Dutch settlers. This may be largely based on the docile, domestic temperament, characteristic of White Hollands, which would indicate the restricted areas of Europe of that day, rather than America. Too, White Hollands are said to have been fairly well-known in England early in the Nineteenth century, and it may be due to their foreign invasion so to speak, that they were later to become well known in the land of their nativity, than were some of the other standard varieties which were perfected in America.

Keep Poults Hungry for First 48 Hours Anyhow

Turkey poults should not be fed anything the first 48 hours after hatching. If they have free range, they will pick up some seeds and insects, which will vary the amount and kind of feed that may be needed after 48 hours. It is best always to keep them just hungry enough so they will be hunting feed and getting the exercise that is required for best growth and livability. Hard-boiled eggs chopped fine and mixed with cornbread crumbs have been found generally satisfactory the first week, after which whole wheat and hulled oats are good. Keep them out of wet grass until they are well along. Three litters of eggs per year are generally about all that will be satisfactory to hatch, because late-hatched poults are likely to be less thrifty.

Kill Harmful Mites

Mites do not live on the chickens by day, but come out and suck their fill of blood when the birds are roosting. First the poultry house must be cleaned thoroughly. Trash, nesting material, etc., should be taken out and burned. Then go over the whole house thoroughly with crude petroleum or carbolineum, using either a spray pump or brush to supply the material. Petroleum is cheaper but the carbolineum gets into the cracks better and lasts longer.

Geese for Breeding

It is inadvisable to dispose of an older goose and keep young geese for breeding purposes, provided the older bird is in good health. Young geese will often lay during their first year, but the eggs are usually infertile and the number produced is seldom as high as would be produced by an older female. Females of the Canadian breeds do not lay, as a rule, until they are three years old, but females of any of the breeds may be kept for breeding.

Eggs for Chicks

Eggs that are tested out of incubators up to the 14th day make good feed for young chicks if properly prepared. They should be boiled for at least 30 minutes so as to kill all germs that may be in them. Then pulverize them in a jar or some container, using a square stick that will thoroughly mix the contents and pulverize the shell as well as the interior portions. The only danger in feeding eggs lies in not cooking them long enough or overfeeding.

High Protein Feeds

Meat meal or meat scraps are high protein feeds and are found in most chick mashes or laying mashes. They are used in connection with dried buttermilk in many feeds to furnish the animal protein which is lacking in grains. Experiments have shown that chicks or laying hens do better when supplied with animal protein to balance up the protein and other ingredients found in grains. Be sure that these products are all clean, fresh and sweet.

Left Cat With Firemen

Two fashionably dressed women walked into an Augusta (Maine) fire station carrying a well-fed cat. Informing the firemen that the cat evidently had been lost by some one in the city, they left the cat. The next morning they appeared to claim the cat. It developed that they had desired to register at one of Augusta's hotels where the cat was taboo and that they had implicit confidence in the kindness and gullibility of Augusta's fire fighters.

How Much Water Should Baby Get?

A Famous Authority's Rule

By Ruth Brittain

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight-pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast-fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day; and it is easily calculated for the bottle-fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Just a word of caution. Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the genuine. The forty-cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.

Kind Husband

Wife—That's the kind of husband to have! Did you hear Mr. Dike tell his wife to go and look at some twenty-dollar hats?

Spouse—My dear, have I ever deprived you of the privilege of looking at twenty-dollar hats?

Unenvied Wealth

Madge—My face is my fortune.

Marie—That reconciles me to my poverty.

I had so many bad feelings at night that I could not sleep and for two years I could not go down town because I was afraid of falling. A Man of Toil and Tolerance

ALL VOTERS are urged to come to the polls next Tuesday to cast their ballot at the presidential primary election. Republicans are particularly requested to vote for Herbert Hoover the candidate in this state of that party and the shadows of whose home Redwood City lies. It is but proper and fitting that Mr. Hoover receive a big vote in his home community. No doubt he will serure a tremendous vote throughout the state, for he is receiving the support of all classes, but the outstanding expression of the people should come from the peninsula, where Mr. Hoover is best known and loved. The Redwood City Hoover Club will make every effort to bring out a one hundred percent vote.

Herbert Hoover was reared in an atmosphere of toil and tolerance. His father was a blacksmith, and his mother a Quaker preacher. Born in 1874, in West Branch, Iowa, he spent his early years among the simple, sturdy folk of that region. The lessons of tolerance and sympathy for the views of others, which the world has seen to be so deeply ingrained in the man's soul, are the natural outgrowth of those boyhood years.

His parents had both died before he was eight years old, and he was reared by Quaker relatives on farms at West Branch, Iowa, and at Newburg, Oregon. He was only thirteen years of age when he began to earn his living in the truck gardens near Portland; later he worked as an office boy at Salem and as a clerk in Portland. Meantime he attended school, and being told of the new Stanford University in California, he prepared himself to enter it by attending night school.

Memories of Herbert Hoover will ever be a part of the traditions of Stanford University. He was the first student resident at the University's dormitory, and, being essentially a worker, he enrolled in the department of geology and mining. In the summer he found employment with various geological surveys, and when he graduated his first job was that of mine laborer in Grass Valley, California.

From mine laborer in 1895 to world renowned mining engineer and industrial executive in 1913 is a long, hard climb. In between, stretch eighteen years of work, ambition, integrity, ability, and more work. In 1913 the concerns of which he was the executive engineer employed over one hundred and seventy-five thousand men, and no strike ever interrupted their operations during his administration. His profession had carried him to the ends of the earth; China, England, Russia, Burma, Mexico, Australia, Alaska, all felt the constructive, directing influence of the man. And he, in turn, broadened and enriched by the comprehensive knowledge gained from his observations and contacts, became fitted as few men have ever been fitted, to understand the problems and needs of his country.

In 1914 Hoover was sent to Europe to interest foreign governments and industrial leaders as exhibitors in the Panama Pacific exposition to be held at San Francisco. When the war broke out he was in London, and there the American authorities sought his aid in relieving the situation of the many thousands of Americans stranded in Europe owing to the suspension of banks and dislocation of transportation. He organized the American relief committee and served as its chairman. Over one hundred and sixty thousand Americans were benefitted by this work.

Hardly had he ceased his labors in Europe when in 1921 he was again called upon because of the great famine in Russia. The organization which he formed continued to minister to the Russians until late in 1923, when it was demobilized after having saved millions of lives.

From 1914 to 1923, nine years, Herbert Hoover had dedicated himself to the service of humanity, abandoning his profession, and receiving no compensation, not even traveling expenses; his compensation lay in the knowledge of a great work well done. He brought to the problem of minisetring to the world's war afflicted sufferers a vision and an understanding so practical and so sympathetic as to astonish the people of all nations.

What he did for the unfortunate sufferers in the Missisippi Valley catastrophe is to fresh in our minds to need repetition. He has indeed been "the man of the hour." Where there has been a big job to do, Herbert Hoover has been drafted to do it. And he has ever brought to his work astonishing energy, and ability, and understanding—and he has always succeeded.

Selected to administer the Department of Commerce, a heretofore unimportant department of the federal government, he made it, in less than eight years, one of the principal factors contributing to our national progress and prosperity.

His youth, young manhood, world experience and public service at home and abroad, give him a fitness for the Presidency rarely found in a candidate for that high office.

He maintained always his legal residence in the United States with his principal office in San Francisco, and he kept constantly in touch with his home country.

Understanding, as few men of our day do, our national needs, he advances sound plans for future development, based upon sound economic principles in line with the best features of the platforms of the Republican party from its beginning.

WHERE DO TAXES GO? SATE TO ANSWER QUESTION

Exhaustive Analysis Ir Process of Making By Secretary

By CLEM WHITAKER
Staff Correspondent Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO, April 26 — Government moves in cycles.

Issues, for instance, forge into the ascendency for a time, then drop back into the limbo of things forgotten. But inevitably, like Banquo's ghost, they return

Coming back for a return engagement in state affairs just now is that intriguing subject, "How the state rolls along and the cost per roll," first popularized by the unusual Nellie Brewer Pierce during a heated gubernatorial campaign several years ago.

The issue has become so formidable once again that Dixwell Pierce, tireless young secretary of the State Board of Equalization, is deep in the throes of an exhaustive analysis of just what it costs to operate California's government machine, who buys the gas and oil, figuratively speaking, and who gets the buggy rides.

Dixwell Pierce, incidentally, is not related to Nellie Brewer Pierce. He was just "arriving" in state affairs when "Nellie" was stirring up things as state budget maker.

Here is the major fact developed thus far by the investigation of the equalization board expert:

Government is now costing California taxpayers the tremendous sum of $335,700,000 annually, exclusive of local license fees and special assessments.

The tax mileage of the state machine is not the only item under state inquiry, however, for Pierce has found that the cost per roll of local government vehicles is also mounting rapidly

Though his analysis is far from completed, Pierce revealed that California cities and counties collect some $250,700,000 in local taxes each year, while the state boosts the total to $335,700,000 by an annual tax call approximately $85,000,000.

The Pierce digest of the tax question gives an outline of the entire revenue system—how all property is assessed for taxation, the subjects of taxation, the basis of each levy, the rate and how fixed on each kind of property.

Then, most important from the taxpayers' standpoint, he traces the distribution of the proceeds. In other words, he is trying to find the answer to that cry of the exasperated taxpayers, "where does my money go?"

When completed, the Pierce analysis will be furnished to all county and city revenue officials, tax agents, etc., as a guide in supervising the future trend of taxation.

A motion picture revealing the "History of Monte Toyon," the Methodist summer retreat and conference grounds in the redwoods of Santa Cruz county, was shown on Wednesday evening at the First M. E. Church of this city by E. C. Overholtser, conference lecturer.

The film story opened with views of the virgin redwoods before the invasion of man. The Spanish era in the picture chronicle of Monte Toyon shows the granting of this vast California estate of to Don Rafael Castro by Alcalde Figueroa, governor of Alta California, and follows Don Rafael through the days of gold when his mighty estate dwindled to little more than 6,000 acres.

How Claus Spreckels, the sugar baron, came into ownership of his beautiful estate, with its beach on Monterey Bay and extending into the Redwood covered hillsides, was they depicted.

The later history of Monte Toyon, how it was acquired by the Methodist Conference Association, together with the plans for development of a summer campus and vacation retreat for Methodsists and other church denominations, concluded the picture.

One of the scenic wonders of Monte Toyon, which is depicted, is a natural circle of redwoods, known as Cathedral Cloister, with a massive stump in the center, forming a natural pulpit, where institute and all manner of church conventions will be held.

Monte Toyon is located on the Santa Cruz highway at Rio Del Mar in the redwoods close to the shore of Monterey Bay.

Rev. C. E. Winning, pastor of the Methodist church introduced Mr. Overholtzer. A large audience enjoyed the picture.

ATHLETIC LEAGUE MAY ORDER AN INVESTIGATION

Charges of Unfairness Made Against Two Peninsula Schools

Following the issuance of a letter in which the position of the Sequoia Union High School and the Palo Alto Union High School in reference to a break which occured etween the teams of the Peninsula Athletic League when the Palo Alto and Sequoia high schools refused to meet either the San Mateo or Burlingame teams, was set forth, speculation is now rife as to what action will be taken by the League. The letter was addressed to the president of the League, who is the principal of the Campbell high school, and sets forth in detail the practice which caused the refusal of the Sequoia and Palo Alto schools to refuse to play the teams of the San Mateo and Burlingame schools

The most likely effect of the letter is that a committee will be appointed to investigate the charges, and that this committee will report at the next league meeting, which will occur in May. Both of the protesting schools are firm in their determination not to compromise in this matter and will withdraw from the League if the reprehensible practices are not stopped. The letter follows:

To Mr. R. E. Noddin, President Peninsula Athletic League.

To the Principals of all Schools Holding Memership in the Peninsula Athletic League:

That the position of Palo Alto Union High School and Sequoia Union High School with regard to inter-school athletic relations with San Mateo and Burlingame high schools may be understood by the membership of the Peninsula Athletic League, we call the following matters to your attention:

1. During the recent basketball season the membership of the 130 teams of Palo Alto and Sequoia high schools voted unanimously to refuse to meet the San Mateo high school team, winner of the "X" division of the Peninsula Athletic League. Such action was in protest against the athletic methods in vogue at that institution. Similar action would have been taken had Burlingame high school team won that title.

2. At a later meeting of the Principals and Physical Directors of Palo Alto and Sequoia high schools all inter-school athletic relations with San Mateo and Burlingame high schools were cancelled for the remainder of the school year.

3. At a gathering of the physical directors and coaches of Palo Alto, Sequoia, San Mateo, Burlingame and San Jose high schools held during March at the call of Mr. Lee Lancaster of the Burlingame high school, the representatives of San Mateo and Burlingame high schools confirmed the stand taken by Palo Alto and Sequoia High by admitting the following points:

—that ineligible players have been used on their teams;

—that fraud has been practised in their weight teams by one boy being weighed-in under another's name;

—that proselytizing athletes from other schools has been practised;

—that alluring offers in the matter of employment, scholarship and school attendance have been made to promising athletes;

—that legitimate students of both San Mateo and Burlingame high schools are being deprived of a fair opportunity of representing their schools through the importation of tramp athletes;

—that the railroad fare from a northern state and other expenses incurred by the parents of a promising athlete have been paid to establish temporary residence for such parents to insure the eligibility of the player for North Coast Section competition, after such player had been ruled out of Peninsula Athletic League competition;

—that community animosities, prejudices and jealousies have been brought on to the athletic field which has resulted in the exploitation of the boys rather than their education, with other schools of the League suffering in consequence of such conditions;

—that the spirit of the game has been sacrificed to a persistent demand for victory without any regard to the ethics of sportsmanship;

—that such condition has existed for an indefinite period.

Palo Alto Union High School and Sequoia Union High School enjoy cordial relations with athletic schools will enter into athletic relations with any and all institutions which play according to the Code and whose administrators and coaches compete on the basis of true sportsmanship.

The further continuance of Palo Alto Union High School and Sequoia Union High School as members of the Peninsula Athletic League will depend upon the action of the other schools of the League.

If the schools of the Peninsula Athletic League are in accord with the athletic policy that has been practised at San Mateo Union High School for the past years, and Burlingame High School for the crrrent school year, there will be no other way open to Palo Alto Union High School and Sequoia Union High School than to tender their resignations as members of the Peninsula Athletic League.

Yours very truly,
PALO ALTO UNION HIGH SCHOOL

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY CENTER OF STATE FIGHT

By ESTO BROUGHTON
Staff Correspondent Times-Gazette

SACRAMENTO, April 26 — With the presidential primary scheduled for next Tuesday, the three parties with entries in the California ballot battle are preparing for a final drive on the mobilized army of 1,849,979 registered voters, it appears today.

Bets are 100 percent perfect on Herbert Hoover, California's "favorite son," now secretary of commerce, being the winner on the Republican ticet, as he is the only candidate in that camp "choosing to run" in this state. Hence, the casting of the votes of the 1,254,514 registered members of that party is a ballyhoo gesture to establish the popularity of California's entry in the National Republican contest for presidential nominee to be fought out at the Kansas City Convention in June.

But within the Democratic ranks the fight is waxing keener every day as the May 1st primary draws near with old "Bourbon" party divided into three hostile groups; one supporting "Al Smith, New York governor and Tammany favorite; another lined up behind "Jim" Reed, Missouri Senator and famous anti-league of nations opponent of President Woodrow Wilson's; and a third led by McAdoo backing Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana,, calling itself the "progressive" wing.

There are various cross sections of this triangular fray, one is based upon the degree of political aridity of the contest. Smith from the "Sidewalks of Little Ole New York" believes in making the "Bourbon" party true to its name and in fact the banner bearer of the "wets." The Reedites are not so frankly "wet" but Reed's voting record is not "dry." Walsh, however, is suported by the "bone-dry" element not only of the Democratic party but also of many reputed prohibitionists transferring from other political patries to register their "dry" protest.

Where the lion's share of the Democratic registered vote of 465,793 will go is still a matter of conjecture with "warring home-state" clubs adding to the gaiety of national political warfare.

Carrying fond recollections of the "home-state" with them in their march westward two or three hundred thousand of these "adopted" sons of California may "swing the election."

At any rate, Missourians have flocked into "Jim" Reed political clubs, New Yorkers have formed dozens of "Al" Smith for-president clubs, and Montanans have girded themselves for the fray in defense of their "favorite" son.

The "weight" of this vote may be gauged by the number of transplated citizens now in California. For instanre, there are no less than 101,773 former "natives" of New York arcording to the latest census, whether these will be 'for' Governor Smith in memory of "Auld Lang Syne" or not depends somewhat on whether they are from "up state" in New York or from Gotham, it is predicted by political prophets.

Missourians outnumber even New Yorkers with a grand total of 102,940 who have migrated to California, and the "Jim" Reed proponents are looking for their chief strength within this group, it is reported.

Only 8,865 native Montanans are living in California, a much smaller nucleus for "Tom" Walsh to rely upon, but additional support is expected from the "dry" Iowans, a total of 86,358, of whom have chosen to move to this state.

Iowa is also Hoover's native state it happens although he also claims the support of Californians as a foster son, having made his home in this state since boyhood.

The fifth presidential candidate is Daniel A. Poling, sole entry on the prohibition ticket, and a reluctant candidate, who petitioned the Secretary of State too late to have his name taken off the ballot, according to Charles Hagerty, state election statistician. The total prohibition registered vote is only 16,793, the bulk of which is in Los Angeles county, and represents a loss of several thousand since the presidential primary of 1924.

For the first time in many years the Socialists will not enter a candidate in the California primary field although they plan on entering candidates in the general election in order to keep their place on the ballot, according to notice served on Hagerty.

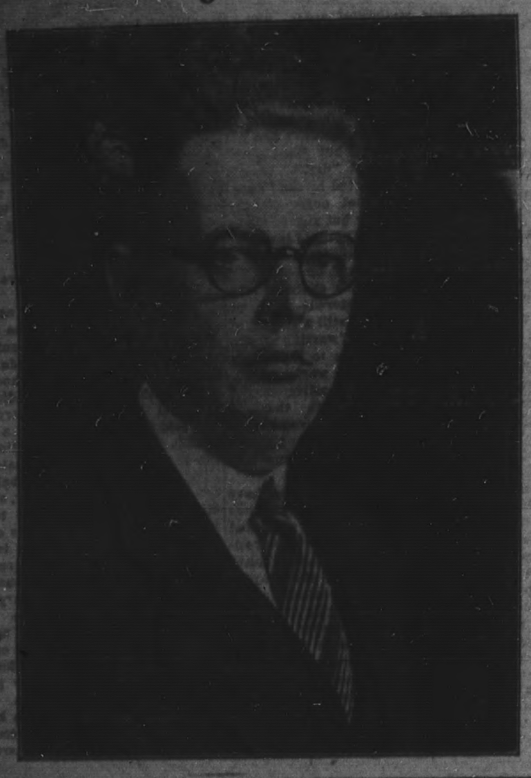
Local Manger Telephone Co.



Redwood City now has a resident manager for The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, according to an announcement made this week by J. W. Gilkyson, coast division manager. Lathrop C. Brown has been appointed to the recently created post. He has had a wide telephone experience in business offices of the company, and, therefore, comes to this city well equipped to handle the many details coincident with the rapid growth of the local telephone system.

Brown is located at the company business office, 20 Webster street, where all matters pertaining to telephone service will continue to be transacted. For the past several years business matters for the Redwood City Exchange have been directed by J. D. Worthington, Palo Alto manager for the company. The growth of the two exchanges, as a result of the expansion and development of Redwood City and Palo Alto, made the creation of a manager-ship for this city essential, company officials state.

P. G. & E. PLAN FURTHER POWER DEVELOPMENT

Application Filed Calls For Work on Site of Mokelumne

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. this week filed with the Federal Power Commission application for further water and power development on the Mokelumne river.

The company now proposes to erect a rock-filled dam, with a concrete face, aproximately 306 feet in height, 300 feet thick at the base, and 25 feet wide at the top. The crest or top length will be 1300 feet.

It will be located on the upper Mokelumne, 50 miles northeast of Jackson, at a site 3650 feet above sea level. Through the erection of this dam it will be possible to store 130,000 acre feet of water.

The application further calls for the erection of the Salt Springs power house at the base of the dam, which will have an installed capacity of 11,000 horsepower.

The construction of a concrete-lined canal and tunnels for the conveying of water from Salt Springs, to a proposed regulating reservoir on Tiger Creek.

The erection of a forebay on Tiger Creek from where water will be dropped approximately 1200 feet through penstocks to the proposed Tiger Creek power house, which will have an installed capacity of 67,000 horsepower.

The construction of a 110,000 volt power line from Salt Springs power house to the Tiger Creek power house.

Air Port Cited As Redwood City's Need

That one of the prime necessities of this city is an airport was a statement made by Captain A. L. Eagle of Crissy Field, San Francisco at the Monday luncheon meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. Captain Eagle spoke on the topic, "Airports and Air Transportation." Another speaker at the meeting Monday was D. H. Hughes, secretary of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco.

Dr. H. A. Clattenburg was chairman of the meeting Monday. Elmore B. Hinman presided.

State Department May Aid Farms

By Capitol News Bureau

SACRAMENTO, April 26 — The Department of Agriculture may try its hand at governing Durham Colony, the state's farming centure for the benefit of former service men, as the result of complaints made by colonists against fertility of the land. So announced Charles W. Cleary, chief of the division of land settlement, declaring he would recommend that the next legislature be asked to amend the land settlement act to permit the director of agriculture to make such adjustments in contracts as seem necessary.

Horses Still Show Popularity in Cities

With automotive competition, the old gray mare may not be what she used to be out on the farm. But in the cities the vogue of the moment seems to be "Horses, horses, horses, pretty little horses," as the song goes.

Believe it or not, there is a greater demand for riding horses in California today than ever before in the state's history. This is according to a survey made by your conservative Uncle Sam, the findings having just been submitted to the State Department of Agriculture.

Fight Forecasted On Marraige Law

By Capitol News Bureau

SACRAMENTO, April 26 — If straw votes show the direction of the political wind then right about face on one of the most bitterly fought issues o fthe last legislature may indicate an equally royal fight when next the lawmakers gather. This appeared when Assemblyman Chris N. Jasperson of Paso Robles, one of the staunchest opponents in 1927 of the so-called "gin-marriage law" provididing for a three-day lapse between declaration of intention to wed and issuance of licenses, today announced he had experienced a change of heart and next January would fight for retention of the law which already is being vigorously attacked. At the same time Assemblyman J. J. Murphy of Weed declared that he had turned from apathy, if not friendliness to hostility for the measure.

IN the old days, the covered wagon or dobbin and the surrey furnished the transportation. Today, fast trains and ships, automobiles and air transport keep pace with the fast moving world. Times and methods change.

Business too has changed. Sales methods of even a decade ago could not compete in the business world of today. Modern salesmen use the telephone to keep in touch with the trade between trips and to sell customers located off the beaten path. Executives can no longer wait days or even hours for a reply to important questions. They rely on the telephone.

Speed, economy and dependability have made this personal means of communication with others nearby and in distant places, a valuable asset in any business.

Successful sales plans include the telephone.

What a Noted Food Authority says: about ICE

By
SARAH FIELD SPLINT
Food Editor McCall's Magazine

"Not for a minute would you consider buying your milk or meat or fish from a dealer who did not keep his supply thoroughly refrigerated! And not for a minute should you consider keeping these foods in your own house unless you can provide the same careful ice refrigeration.

"Foods that come to the housewife fresh from the dealer often deteriorate in the kitchen for want of proper icing. Such foods spoil readily and should be kept at as uniform a temperature as possible.

"A well-iced refrigerator is invaluable not only as a safe-guard to health, but also as a means of preserving the natural flavors in our foods."

Angel food cakes! easy to make

When grandmother made angel food cakes the recipes of her day were inaccurate. It took years to know her oven.

But today, when you accurately measure and mix ingredients, you believe your cakes should always be good.

They will be, unless you're guessing at the oven temperature which is the chief cause of rubbery angel food cakes. They must be baked at 325 degrees.

All the modern gas ranges have the Oven Temperature Control. It keeps the oven at exactly the temperature for which it is set. You place the angal food cake in the oven, set the Control for 325 degrees and leave the kitchen for an hour. The monotony of watching the baking vanishes. Meats, pies, and even a whole meal can also be baked with the same ease and freedom.

The Colfax Bookplate

SYNOPSIS

On a certain momentous Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, cataloguer and seller of rare books at Darrow's New and Second-Hand Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified, white-bearded old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $10 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out in the store. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter, whom she seems to recognize as the man who bought the rare book in Richmond, Va., a few days before: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, began that morning working at Darrow's.

"What a shame!" I sympathized. "People are just silly. And maybe it's a little too soon to expect to rent the flat. Your luck will turn!"

Ernesto gave a pessimistic-artistic shrug, and moved off to greet some new arrivals. Nancy leaned over the table toward me.

"I want to ask your advice," she announced. "Peter thinks you're the most sensible young woman he knows."

"Thank you. That makes a girl feel so nice and safe!"

Absorbed in a new idea, Nancy continued to lean over the table, and so missed a two-second drama that flashed past on the staircase. Silhouetted against the big hall window the figure of a young man suddenly turned the corner of the landing, leaped to the hall, posed effectively an instant, back toward me, before a long mirror near the staircase, then satisfied, flashed past the hall door. The front door slammed. His visored cap had been low on his face, he wore a loud, vaguely familiar suit. . . .

"This is what I want to ask you about," Nancy was saying eagerly. "Do you think it would be all right if Peter and I should take that flat upstairs? Could you and I look at it after lunch? Do you think it would be all right?"

"Why . . . I suppose so, if you and Peter want a flat. But why . . ."

"Because Malvina insulted me so about my elopement that I simply won't stay home. Neither will Peter. We've left and we haven't anywhere to go, not even tonight! And we've always lived downtown and like it, and I love to keep house, and I don't see why I should be done out of everything just because . . . Oh, I never finished!"

I perceived that I was now in for the conclusion of this distressing child's singular romance.

"Brandon came to the house in about half an hour to get my suit case," proceeded Nancy, systematically; "while everybody was still out. It was packed, standing by the hall hat-rack. He waited there while I dashed upstairs for my things; I hadn't expected him quite so soon. I came right down again, but he was already holding the door open, with the suitcase in one hand and his own bag in the other. We got the train all right. As we were getting into Trenton, where it stopped, he suggested going into the diner to get some tea; he said if I'd go in first and keep a table, he'd come right along after he'd moved our things to a better seat that was just being vacated. But I had to come right back, for the diner was full; I met him just as he was starting forward with our bags, and goodness, he was cross! I thought he must be terribly hungry, and didn't say anything.

"Well, at Philadelphia, we had to change trains for Atlantic City, and wait a few minutes for the connection. He said: 'Why don't you go buy those picture-postals?' I had suggested sending some home to tell our news. So I went over to the newsstand and turned around to look at him, and . . . he was racing toward the door with our two bags!"

"What did you do?" I inquired, at last interested.

"I ran faster, another way, and got to the door first, and . . ."

"Yes, my dear?"

"I grabbed away my own suitcase, and hit him—hard."

"Nancy," said I, in congratulatory tones, "shed no tears over your erstwhile friend Mr. Tower. I think you did a good job with him."

"That's what the Travelers' aid lady said," observed Nancy, complacently. "The station guard got her, right away, because I cried and Brandon . . . ran! She telegraphed for Peter, and he came for me late in the evening. I was so-o-o glad to see him! And then, as he and the Travelers' aid lady and I were crossing the station to the New York train—will you believe me?—there was Brandon again, snooping behind a bench! Well, like a fool—I suppose because I was so nervous—I screamed."

"Why did he come back?" I couldn't help puzzling aloud.

"I give up," confessed Nancy. "Did he think I would ever, ever, ever, in this world or the next, forgive him for trying to get rid of me after he'd asked me to go off with him? Well, anyway, there he was."

"What did he do?"

"Ran, of course."

"And I suppose Peter gave chase?"

"Yes; he overtook him, and they had a dreadful fight right there in the station, but Brandon got away, and Peter got arrested, and came home only this morning. The Travelers' aid lady brought me home. And on the train," whispered Nancy, in an awe-struck tone, as the last fragment of pastry vanished, "the queerest thing of all happened!"

"What was it?"

"You see, I cried so much I had to have a clean handkerchief. I opened my suitcase to get one, and inside were Peter's gray tweed suit and collars and razors and things and a crumbly old leather law book!"

"Nancy! Was it really Peter's suitcase all the time, and not yours?"

"You get the point at once. I hadn't noticed it before, because I hadn't been carrying the bags; anyway, the two suitcases are just ordinary black leather ones, much alike. I haven't had time yet to figure out how they got changed, but at least I changed them back again when I got home. Come on, let's go and look at that flat."

I summoned Ernesto, and explained to him that Miss Burton was desirous of inspecting his vacant apartment. By the happiest of coincidences, she and her brother were now seeking new living-quarters, and shared his contempt for the subway. Ernesto raptly led us forthwith up two steep flights of stairs, and into a sunny front suite of three small rooms, made by cunning partitioning out of one former enormous apartment.

Nancy eyed with cool appraisal the furniture in the living-room, punched the mattresses, rattled the pots in the kitchenette, and discussed terms with Ernesto. She had not kept house for a refined, genteelly poor widowed father for nothing. Finally:

"Who else lives here?" she inquired.

"In the rear apartment, just behind, me!" replied Ernesto. "Me, my wife, my four children. Never will you be lonely! Below" he paused with an air of climax—"lives Mr Grosvenor!"

"Who's he?" demanded Miss Manhattan, with unshaken morale.

"Most distinguish gentleman! He owned this house long ago. It was his father's. He sell to me, I rent him one floor, so all his life he live in one house. Think, for New York!"

"Is he nice?" inquired Nancy.

"Sure! I tell you, most distinguish! Miss Grosvenor, also. They are very quiet lady and gentleman, and . . . most distinguish! Nobody else live here; everybody nize!"

"Well, I guess if my brother and I will do, we'll come," decided Nancy, and with her breath-taking speed snatched a ten-dollar bill from her purse and thrust it at Ernesto. He bustled downstairs ahead of us to make out the receipt for the deposit.

"Nancy," I remonstrated feebly "wouldn't it be better to wait and let Peter come and see—" Suppose he doesn't—"

"Certainly he will like it! He's got to; I took it on his account—so convenient, right in our business neighborhood! I am perfectly positive it is going to be just the right place for us!"

So they were coming there. But most of Nancy's previous judgments filled me with a curious apprehension that somehow it was going to be just the wrong place for them. My luncheon enterprise had certainly been successful in convincing Nancy that all is not necessarily over at seventeen; nevertheless, it had filled me with an inexplicable sinking feeling which even the affectionate God-speed of Ernesto failed to dispel.

CHAPTER IV

Exit Bookplate

It was very quiet in the shop. Daisy Abbott, noting my entrance, stole forward, loaded to the guards with important news.

"That poor old gentleman! He died at one o'clock, Mr. Case told us."

"Without recovering consciousness?" I inquired, spreading out my index cards as a gentle hint that I would be alone.

"Yes; and nobody knows who he is. And employees are not to talk about the accident, Miss Fuller. And, oh, that girl who gave the alarm! She's still unconscious, the hospital people say. Isn't this the most exciting and awful thing you ever had happen to you?"

I agreed fervently; and Daisy evaporated, giving me a chance, while finishing my index, to reflect on the many strange events connected with that mysterious old law book now up in Mr. Darrow's office.

How many persons had shown interest in it! Peter Burton; his unknown rival bidder at Richmond; "that girl;" whoever had broken open Peter's suitcase in the hotel, and now, the polite and handsome Brandon Tower? For under whose auspices, if not his, had Nancy's suitcase suddenly become Peter's? "Elopement," forsooth! He had not had even the slightest design against her! His proposal to elope was nothing but a pretext to enter the Burton house; for Nancy, with her artless narrative of Peter's Richmond trip, had informed him exactly where the law book was—of whose existence and value he was evidently somehow aware already. Then in the number of the book fanciers was the poor old gentleman of the law alcove.

Yet was it sensible to assume that out of the hundreds of books there, he had specially wanted Clarihew's "Notes"? But if not, why was the girl who had a vital interest in that very book, so extraordinarily upset when she found the old man dying? Why did she cry, "Keep it for me"?

Now, whatever value it had was as an antique, and for law-book collectors. As the book itself was not a valuable trophy, could there be anything about the plate that might have influenced the searcher of Peter's suitcase?

I resolved to presume on the fact of being one of the employees Mr. Darrow spoke to; to ascend to his office; and to ask his secretary to let me see Clarihew's "Notes." Incidentally, I intended to get a look at that bookplate, myself.

I rang for the elevator. Down it clanked with unheard-of promptness, and out stepped Mr. Case and a tall young man, a stranger.

"Ah, Miss Fuller," said Mr. Case, "of course you're unfailingly ready for us. This is Captain Ashland, Mr.

"I Grabbed Away My Suitcase, and Hit Him Hard."

Darrow's nephew. He's been looking us over for an hour or so already, and, by the way of a climax, has come to see your famous card index. Miss Fuller, sir, can give you more exact information than anyone else here regarding our cataloguing methods."

"Quite so!" murmured Captain Ashland, agreeably; "and of course I am here in search of information, and . . . er . . . instruction."

With all the enthusiasm I did not feel on being thus baffled by a person so surprising that he could reach an appointment ahead of time, I led the way to my desk. The captain promptly revealed other surprises. His opening remarks had certainly not been recalcitrant, and he did not look any more complacent than any other keen, prosperous young man in the late twenties. He was dark-haired, clean shaven, slightly stooped; he had a brilliant rosy complexion, rather small, very sharp twinkling gray eyes, half-concealed behind tight spectacles with tiny black rims, and a most amiable expression, in which composure was the leading characteristic.

Moreover, I soon saw that while I might introduce him to new mechanical devices, I could learn far more than I taught, about rare books and literary curiosities. He had been too severely wounded, it seemed, in the Somme offensive in 1916, ever to return to the front. He had therefore turned—rebelliously, I judge, at that hour of history—to acquire a thorough knowledge of his ancestral business. I got a further jar when I saw him take promptly to our rainbow card system.

In listening to his modest but authoritative conversation, for the first time that day I forgot my troubles, and, what was still better, other people's. And then suddenly a vivid blaze of life and color came lilting down the aisle of the old, dim bookshop, which had that very morning been the scene of sinister tragedy: Nancy, with her bright blue eyes, her waving chestnut hair, her peach-silk-clad feet and her apple-green frock. Under her left arm was pressed a thin octavo volume bound in calfskin.

"Pardon me, Miss Fuller; I have a message from Mr. Darrow for you," she began carefully and importantly, as if repeating a formula she had been taught. "Will you kindly remove the bookplate from this book, and have it and the book advertised for sale, separately, in the trade press?"

Consumed with curiosity, I took the book. A shiny black label pasted on the back bore the gilt-lettered title:

NOTES
on Medical Statutes in the Virginia
Code
. . . .
W. Clarihew
1810

"You're sure the message is correct?" I inquired. "I understood this book had already been ordered by the Legal federation."

Nancy's red lips parted in an excited flitter.

"They won't take it!"

I was stricken dumb by this devastating information.

"It's too expensive!" confided Nancy, with most interesting indiscretion, Captain Ashland was observing her composedly, and with that close attention one bestows on a remarkable foreigner, and I sensed that the next minute she would spill out, giving due credit for same, his uncle's possibly hectic remarks on learning that he had for once overreached himself. Heavens! Had Ulysses hit the bull's-eye again? For Mr. Darrow had certainly lost some money! I gave Nancy a look that frost-bit even her giggle.

"Very well; go to Miss Wilkes, and tell her I will follow Mr. Darrow's instructions. Do you understand, Miss Burton?"

Nancy nodded and retired. I turned toward the captain with the book.

"Here," I remarked, "is a curiosity you'll be glad, I believe, to have crossed the ocean to see. It's a Colfax bookplate."

"I say! that would be a find—an American Colfax!" ejaculated Captain Ashland, almost excitedly. He rose and came around the desk beside me. "Let us see it!"

I opened the first cover, and our eyes rested on the owner's label glued inside, that eagerly sought prize, I recalled, of so many pursuers. It was evident at once that this was what is called a pictorial plate; that is, one with the design in the form of a picture, as opposed, for an instance, to a coat of arms or an allegorical design. Collectors can often tell promptly, also, the nationality of the plate and its artist. In this case the serpent shaped in a capital "C" had guided Peter in identifying the work as that of Colfax, thus making the picture out as of English origin, and fixing its date somewhere in the late Eighteenth or early Nineteenth century.

The design depicted in the foreground a table on which stood an alembic, or old distilling vessel, a skull, a scalpel and other small instruments of scientific appearance. The three objects named were, I knew, purely conventional symbols, often used. They announced, despite the absence of an owner's name, that this had been a physician's bookplate. But from this point the plate took on more originality, for in the distant background of the picture appeared a seascape, where a frigate under full sail floated on the waves. The sides of the picture were framed by two Greek columns of conventional classic style, which formed an attractive setting for the drawing.

Trace Wedding Cake to Old Roman Custom

The wedding cake is believed to be the survival of an old Roman practice when the bride and groom not only ate together as a sign of their kinship and mutual love, but feasted the guests as well. At this time it was good etiquette to break the cake over the bride's head as a sign of plentifulness. In the marriage ceremonies of the early Anglo-Saxons huge baskets of dry crackers were employed. After the feast each guest took a cracker home with him and the remainder was distributed to the poor. "Later it became the custom for the guests themselves to bring to the wedding small, richly spiced buns, which were piled in one huge mound on the table. It was a common occurrence for the bride and groom to attempt to kiss each other over this mound, and if they succeeded they were assured lifelong prosperity." It is said the wedding cake of today is due to the genius of a French cook, who, while traveling in England, observed the inconvenience of stacking hundreds of these small cakes in a mound and conceived the idea of cementing the mound into a single huge cake with icing. At the wedding feast it was the duty of the newly married man to wait on his bride at the table, whence came the name bridegroom—signifying one who serves the bride.

For Her Sake

"Ye gods!" exclaimed Smith, who had come up just in time to see South exchanging $30 for an antiquated car. "What in heaven's name are you buying that old wreck for?"

"Well, explained South, "my wife is ashamed every time she has to admit we haven't a car. I can't afford a car, but by having this thing that won't run and won't need any upkeep in the garage, she'll be able to say we have a car and there'll be no need to go into any further details."

Sand Has Many Uses

Fire sand is a highly refractory silica sand, especially suitable for manufacture of fire brick, for lining furnaces and ladles used to contain molten metals, for making molds and for other refractory products.

Failure That Ended Career of Speculator

Anthony W. Morse, who, during the Civil war, was one of the powerful men in Wall street, got such a high opinion of his knowledge of national resources that he tried to bump the United States treasury off the financial map but was bumped off himself. Secretary of the Treasury Salmon P. Chase, being advised that Morse's speculations were inflating and endangering the national credit, announced that if the inflations were carried any further he, Chase, would prick the bubble by selling gold. Anthony W. Morse thereupon sent Secretary Chase a dispatch saying he would be glad to buy all the gold the United States had to sell. Chase thereupon ordered $10,000,000 worth of gold sold to the highest bidder. The usual notice appeared in the morning newspapers and a panic at once followed. Two hours after the exchange had opened, it was announced that Morse had failed. The financier's ill success soured him and his health failing he died soon afterward, in Cuba.—Kansas City Star.

Conserving Eyesight

A lazy Indian sunning himself outside a small railway station in New Mexico gazed at the landscape first with one eye, then the other. When questioned by curious tourists as to his reasons for keeping one eye closed he replied with dignity, "See everything with one eye. No good wear out both."

Now the Massachusetts board of optometry goes the Indian one better and advises conservation of vision by keeping the eyes closed while listening to the radio. The practice may be observed frequently at symphony concerts, but is not followed there for conservation of vision.

A train of thought should not be allowed to run wild.

Bell to Star for Boston Braves

LESTER BELL, regular third baseman of the Cardinals for three years, has been released to the Boston Braves in consideration for infielder Andy High, who is a St. Louisan, and a cash consideration. While the Cardinals obtain in High a player who is capable of playing any infield position with the possible exception of first, Manager McKechnie does not plan to use him as regular third sacker. He said that, according to his present plans, High would be used in a utility role, with Wattie Holm as the hot corner guardian.

Lester Bell.

The trade of Bell was not unexpected. While he was hitting the ball hard in his spring appearances, he was miserable afield. In nearly every game he appeared his fielding was erratic.

With a change in scenery, and playing with Rogers Hornsby, under whom, in 1926, he had his greatest season, Bell may be able to return as a star. When the Cardinals won the pennant and world series in 1926, Bell was one of the greatest third basemen in the game. He hit .325, being the team's leading hitter that year, and he also fielded well.

Missing the driving influence of Hornsby, Bell proved a "flop" last year. He batted only .259, and as his hitting declined, so did his fielding. He appeared in 115 games. Even in his best years, however, Bell was not a popular player in St. Louis. He was unmercifully "ridden" by fans on numerous occasions.

The passing of Bell ends a six-year term in the Cardinals' organization. Purchased from Lansing from the Central league in 1922 for a small sum, he was "farmed" to Syracuse, and then to Houston in 1923. He was recalled by the Cardinals that year, and played in fifteen games, batting .373.

In 1924 Bell got into seventeen games with the Red Birds, and then was sent to Milwaukee on option. He was recalled at the end of the season. After batting .365 during these few years, Bell was used as a shortstop.

From 1925 to the present, Bell was a regular with the Cardinals, being converted into a third baseman. His first full season he batted .285. As mentioned, he batted .325 in 1926 and .259 last year. His lifetime batting average is .294. Bell is twenty-seven years of age.

Bell took the release nonchalantly. "It's baseball," he commented. "Though I hate to leave the Cardinals, I feel that the trade will benefit me a great deal. I like to play with Hornsby. They may say what they want about him, but he's always treated me royally, and I think I'll find my new surroundings very agreeable."

DIAMOND PICK-UPS

And then we have the Pirates, who lost three straight to the Frisco Seals.

• • •

Pitcher Billings of Detroit knows his groceries. His first job was driving a wagon for a grocer.

• • •

Danny Clark, Cardinal outfielder, has been released outright to the Houston club of the Texas league.

• • •

Charles Barnes, a younger brother of Virgil and Jess Barnes, is trying out with the New York Giants this spring.

• • •

Frank (Red) Crist, first baseman of the Fairmont team of the Middle Atlantic league, has decided to quit baseball.

• • •

Rabbit Whitman, Montreal outfielder, has hit under .300 only once since he's been in baseball, dropping to .283 five years ago.

• • •

Bill Cissell, the costly rookie of the Chicago White Sox baseball club, has been insured for $100,000. Cissell cost the Sox $128,000.

• • •

Ben Chapman and Allen Cooke, two youngsters with the New York Yankees, have been released optionally to Asheville of the Sally league.

• • •

Outfielder Joe Bonowitz of the Fort Worth Panthers was called away from camp recently by the death of his mother in Columbus, Ohio.

• • •

Harry Rice, fleet outfielder who was acquired from St. Louis during the winter, should make the Detroit outfield one of the best in the majors this season.

• • •

Jim Poole, who tried for two seasons to play first base satisfactorily for Connie Mack's Athletics, will play with Atlanta in the Southern league this year.

• • •

Danny Taylor, recruit outfielder with the Brooklyn Robins, has been turned over to Memphis of the Southern league. He was not quite what Uncle Robby wanted.

• • •

"Shanty" Hogan, the Giants' catcher, celebrated his twenty-second birthday while the Giants were in spring training. In an exhibition game that day he got two hits.

• • •

Split seasons have been adopted for the coming year by the Pacific Coast league, Southern association, Western league, Texas league and numerous class C and D organizations.

• • •

Old Alex is one of the grand-daddies of the big time now. Grover Alexander of the St. Louis Cardinals is forty-one and in his seventeenth campaign this season. He started with the Phillies in 1911.

• • •

Albert Kritt, a young outfielder from Washington, has been signed by Manager Joe Neptune for his Frederick Hustlers of the Blue Ridge league. He was given an early trial by Atlanta of the Southern league.

• • •

Fred G. Somers, former International and Eastern league first sacker, has been appointed manager of the Petersburg club of the revamped Virginia league. Somers had a shot at it in the National league at one time.

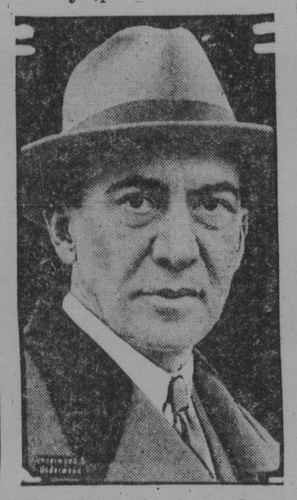
• • •

Gabby Street, former Washington catcher, estimates that he has caught about 2,700 games since he broke into the professional game in 1902. Gabby, who has seen forty-five summers pass, worked in 68 games in the Sally league last season.

• • •

Harry O'Neill, veteran pitcher who managed the Salt Lake City team last year, has accepted a like job with Boise of the Utah-Idaho league. The Salt Lake franchise was recently transferred to Boise and O'Neill decided to string along with it.

Olympic Team Pilot



The photograph shows Lawson Robertson, track and field coach of the University of Pennsylvania, and head coach of the American Olympic team in 1924 who was chosen by the Amateur Athletic union to be head coach again this year when the Olympic games will be held in Amsterdam. "Robbie" will also be business manager of the expedition.

Sport Notes

Association football has developed into the most popular sport in Austria since the World war.

Hans Steinke, the ponderous German, is recognized as the world's heavyweight wrestling champion by the New York athletic commission, and has been seeking a match with Ed "Strangler" Lewis ever since he won the title from Joe Stecher.

FIVE CLUBS HAVE A CHANCE TO WIN

McGraw Rates Giants With Four Others.

John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, regards the 1928 pennant race in the National league as "open." He gives his club an equal chance with four others to win the championship.

"Most decidedly five clubs have a chance to win the pennant in the National league this year," he said.

"We except to be in there fighting with the others, and I am very hopeful. The condition of our pitchers pleases me. Their stay at Hot Springs did them a great deal of good. They reported here with their wind good as a result of mountain climbing, and this is a most important item.

"Naturally the pitchers are ahead of the other members of the squad in development. The regulars have been coming along well enough, and before we leave Augusta the team will begin to take definite shape.

"Cohen will play second base. I am much encouraged by his early playing there. I think he will surprise a great many persons who thought he would not measure up to the mark. He is an earnest worker and highly intelligent. There is no reason why he should not be a high-class second baseman.

"Some of the younger pitchers have also developed rapidly and I am inclined to believe two or even three may be members of the first string.

"There is a possibility that I will carry seven outfielders, counting Ott as an outfielder, or six if we consider him an infielder. At this time he is both, and he can step into either the infield or outfield and give a good account of himself.

"I think nine pitchers will be enough and that probably will be the number retained."

Manager McGraw thinks the fight will be between the Giants, Pirates, Cardinals, Cubs and Reds. The first four finished the first division, although not in that order, last year. The Little Napoleon thinks well of Cincinnati, at the head of the second division in 1928.

Muldoon Is Against Holding in the Ring

William Muldoon, one of the three Solemn Solons of boxing in New York, while he has nothing against a holding company, is much set against holding in company, especially when that holding is in the ring. At the weekly meeting of the New York State Athletic commission Mr. Muldoon declared himself.

"There has been entirely too much holding in some recent so-called boxing bouts," thundered the dean of boxing solons, the while his colleagues on the commission nodded assent, "and we propose to have it stopped. Hereafter the referees will be warned to take note of this particular breach, and holding will count against the offender in the final reckoning that will be instrumental in rendering the decision."

Ruth Picks Yankees

Sizing up the contenders for the approaching big league campaign, Babe Ruth forecasts the Yankees and Cardinals in the world series next October. He figures Connie Mack's Athletics, with Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, finishing in second place in the American league scramble. He has the Pirates slated for second place in the National, and the Giants third.

Betty Nuthall Is Seen as Helen Wills' Rival

Betty Nuthall, "Beaming Betty" of the continental courts, will need her new over-hand service and an effective one if she is to cope with the power of Hellen Wills' attack abroad this year.

The young English girl, finalist in the American championships last year against Miss Wills, is generally looked upon as the Californian's most interesting rival.

It will be one of the high spots of the court campaign when they meet at Wimbledon in June.

Without Young Golfers

England finds herself without young golfers who carry the stamp of greatness.

Great Britain can offer none.

There seems to be no fit successor to Ray or Vardon, Taylor or Herd, in the professional ranks and none for Ball or Hilton in the amateur field.

Taylor, at the age of fifty-one, and Herd, at fifty-six, remain among the winning tournament players of Great Britain.

COLLEGE FRIENDSHIP

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE fraternity was celebrating the fortieth anniversary of its founding and they had come back, these three old boys, to take part in the celebration. One was a banker and one was a lawyer and the third was a physician, high up in scientific accomplishment. I was simply an onlooker, a grand officer of the organization. I would be introduced at the banquet with the old familiar phrase, "We are very fortunate to have with us this evening," etc., but I really didn't count. It was the three men who counted. Past sixty they were, and charter members, and friends through more than forty years.

There are no friendships, it seems to me, quite like college friendships. Boys come together at a most impressionable time of life. They are away from home probably for the first time, very often they know no one, and possibly they are desperately homesick. There is the community of interest immediately, a bond of sympathy, a mutual understanding and a mutual helpfulness. It was thus these three had met.

They came into the chapter house, gray haired, the slenderness of youth gone, as was the spriteliness of youth. The active men—boys, I might better say—received them with some ceremony as befitted their age. They expected dignity and a certain reserve, but the old men greeted each other as in the old days.

"Hello, Ed."

"Well, you old buzzard, Lige."

"And here's our little Willie boy!"

They sat with their arms around each other; they told old tales of half-forgotten escapades, of tricks they had played upon each other, of the clever ways in which they had kept the wolf from the door, for none of them had an easy life in college. Each man had succeeded in his own way, but it was not of this that they talked; it was of the old days, of the old friends, the old tasks, and as they talked they seemed to grow closer together. They were inseparable. They wandered over the old college grounds; they sought out the places where they had lived, they strolled down the old walks as they had done when their sweethearts were with them forty years before.

Their speeches at the banquet were all humorous speeches, only at the last moment there was a little ceremony, and the doctor was presented with a jeweled pin in recognition of some service he had rendered to the chapter, and some very tender words were said. The judge pinned the emblem on, and there were tears in his eyes, and there were tears in everyone's eyes, and they had their arms about each other, these old men, and then they smiled and wiped the tears out of their eyes.

"Aren't we fools?" they said to each other.

College friendships! There's nothing like them.

Market for Old Tires

Washington. — Discarded American automobile tires that once were dispatched to rubber salvaging plants now are being made into shoes for peasants of Saloniki, Greece. It is reported that 50,000 casings are imported annually to meet the demand. Each tire makes three shoes.

"Saloniki is famous as a city of refuge," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society. "That fact accounts for its enormous peasant population to whom the new footgear is a luxury.

"The original 'Salonikans' are lost in the shuffle of nationalities represented among the inhabitants," continues the bulletin. "On any busy corner one will see nearly as many different races as sit in a session of the League of Nations. There are Greeks from all parts of the peninsula, Albanians, Italians, Russians, Germans and natives of every Balkan state. Some of their families are among the oldest inhabitants, human remnants of the early occupation of the city when it was a football in the hands of empires, including the Macedonians, Saracens, Normans, Romans, Venetians, Bulgarians and Turks.

Rival of Constantinople.

"Even with such a mixture, Saloniki has maintained its prestige as one of the most important ports of southeast Europe. When the Balkan states are at peace and the port is used as an outlet to the sea, it rivals Constantinople.

"The fine buildings which form a solid wall on the land side of the quay, pierced only by streets leading up into the city, give Saloniki a modern appearance. Here and in the commercial district there are shops, coffee houses and a few fine old residences. The westerner at once notices a lack of parks and other open spaces, but a peep through an open door to a courtyard in a narrow side street reveals that most of Saloniki's beauty is hidden behind high walls.

"In the dirty streets barefoot women plod the rough cobble with loads of wood tied to their backs that one might hesitate packing on a donkey. Smiling, ragged water boys and girls in tatters carry their heavy jugs. Milkmen, too poor to own carts, are weighted down by two five-gallon cans resting upon their backs until their bodies are at right angles with their legs.

"Successive fires and pilferings have destroyed historic landmarks. One of its oldest existing antiquities is Varder street, which cuts across the city. It was a part of the old Roman highway from the Adriatic to the Bosporus, which earlier still was the Royal way of the Macedonia kings. Where the Roman legions, the phalanxes of Alexander and the immortals of Xerxes trod its surface, an American street car rumbles, driven by a modern Greek or Spaniard. In its course it runs under an old Roman arch.

"Some of the Saloniki churches survived the fury of the Middle ages and are the finest remains of the past.

"The Greeks have suffered by remaining in Saloniki under foreign regime, but one source of inspiration to them has been the sight of Mount Olympus towering among the hills to the southwest."

New Rustless Wheat on Market in 1929

St. Paul, Minn.—With only 125 bushels of the seed available, the Minnesota agricultural experiment station will not market its new rust-resistant wheat until 1929.

Andrew Ross, director of the station, says the present supply will be planted in 1928 under conditions that will insure still greater development and that seed likely will be made available to Minnesota farmers in 1929.

The new wheat is a cross between Marquis, the standard bread wheat of the Northwest, and the durum Iumillo. It is highly resistant to rust and at the same time of good milling quality. When offered for seed it likely will cost 26 per cent more than ordinary wheat.

Two Crowds

Anyone who thinks at all seriously and accurately soon realizes that there are two crowds in the world; one thinking somewhat as he does, and the other thinking in a different way. It is fortunate if you belong to the big crowd. I long ago decided I belonged to the minority; not a great many accept my final conclusions, although they are honestly considered. I have decided that in some respects I am better than the average; in others, worse.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Tapping Maple Trees

Tapping only one place on a tree prolongs the life of the tree. Large first-growth trees may be tapped in two and sometimes three places without injury, but it is disastrous to tap in two places near together, in order to collect the sap from the two in one bucket.

Tribe's Refuse Is Only Monument

Washington.—When the Calusa Indians, who dominated southern Florida when the Spaniards landed, and who were reported to have grown rich on the shipwrecked gold of the Conquistadores, became extinct, they left behind them as almost their sole monument the refuse of the food they ate. Their principal diet was shellfish and the shells they threw out piled up into heaps thirty feet high and hundreds of feet long.

The Smithsonian institution's recent expedition under Henry B. Collins, Jr., determined the point about which there had been some uncertainty, that these shell heaps were really kitchen middens and not artificial structures with some other significance. The proof is that all the shell heaps investigated were stratified with ashes, small animal bones and other refuse from the kitchen.

The language of the Calusa, except for a few isolated words and place names, is lost, little or nothing is known of their beliefs, customs or material culture. Some mounds of soft beach material and loose sand do exist, some of which were foundations for houses, and others burial mounds. Mr. Collins excavated several of these. His most important find was of twenty-five well preserved skeletons in a single mound.

Most of the bodies had been folded with the knees to the chin and burial was very close together. The skeletons were excellently preserved. The burials probably took place before the coming of the white man, since only one bone was found with any evidence of disease and the artifacts associated with the burials were purely of native origin.

SIGNS WITH INDIANS

Cleveland will have a place for Aaron Ward this year even though that place is on the bench. He's a valuable kind of player to have around, opines Manager Peckinpaugh, and Peck teamed with him last year on the White Sox and should know. Aaron has been fitting himself for regular duty in the infield in case there is an early season vacancy.

A whirlpool is created by the coming together of two strong currents of water. The greatest whirlpool in the world is Charybdis in the Strait of Messina, which has been in existence thousands of years. The largest one in the United States and one of the most famous is just below Niagara falls.

Some Evidence That Old Wash Did Shake

Jack Stone, the well-known sports man, has returned to New York to take out a patent on a balloon jumping device with which, he says, the balloon jumper can jump two miles in perfect safety.

"Heretofore," Mr. Stone said to a New York reporter, "balloon jumping has been too dangerous. Every time you jumped a hundred yards or so you felt as scared up there in the air—well, as scared as old Wash White.

"Old Wash, you know, saw a ghost. He said afterwards:

"'Ah jes' come outen de cow-shed and Ah has a bucket er milk in mah hand. Den Ah hears a moanin' sound, and de ghost he done rush at me.'

"'Lawdy, lawdy!' said Cal Clay. 'Was you scairt? Did you shake, man?'

"'Ah dunno if Ah was scairt,' said old Wash, 'and Ah ain't sayin' for suttin dat Ah shook; but when Ah gits home Ah finds all de milk gone and free pound o' butter in de bucket.'"

Much American Land Once Part of Mexico

Nearly a third of the territory of the continental United States was once a part of Mexico. It was acquired by the United States in three annexations. The first was when Texas, which had rebelled from Mexico and set up a separate government, was annexed to this country in 1845.

The question of the Texas boundary led to the Mexican war, at the conclusion of which our southern neighbor ceded everything north of the Rio Grande and Gila rivers. In 1853 this country settled a number of questions of boundary, property and damages by purchasing an additional strip of southwestern land from Mexico—the Gadsden purchase.

Included in these three cessions were all of the states of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada and California; more than half of Colorado, and parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Wyoming.

Section Without Railroads

In the state of Texas there is a section, said to embrace 50,000 square miles, one-fifth the area of the state, in which there is no railroad. This is the largest railroadless area in the country and almost equals the eight states of New Hampshire, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Delaware.

Wheat Without Soil

San Francisco.—Growth of a super-wheat that reached maturity in 13 weeks with neither soil nor sunlight was announced here by the University of California. Wheat, under field conditions, often requires five months to mature.

The announcement follows completion of lengthy research in a laboratory on the university campus by Prof. A. R. Davis of the division of agriculture chemistry and Prof. D. R. Roagland of the division of plant nutrition.

The experiment is recognized by these scientists as of the widest possible import.

The wheat was grown, it was revealed, in a greenhouse laboratory, where artificial light was furnished by means of 12 argon-filled lamps of 300 candlepower each and where jars of water containing the chemical elements necessary for plant growth replaced the soil which ordinarily contains them.

The quality of the wheat at maturity, the professors declare, was much higher than that raised under field conditions and could be classified as being of a "supernature."

The fact that the wheat was grown to maturity in 13 weeks, a previously unheard-of achievement, demonstrates, according to the investigators, that the length of the light period is important to growing plants.

The lights applied to the wheat plants were turned on for 16 hours a day, and this kept them growing rapidly. With the doubling of the light exposure the plant development was multiplied by four, the professors revealed, and when the light was applied for a full 24-hour day the growth was "astounding."

Previous experimenters in these pioneer field were troubled by the infrared, or heat, rays from the lamps and used a water screen to solve the problem. But this was an unsuccessful solution, and Professor Davis found the correct one. He circulated air through the glass chamber by means of an electric fan.

It was established that the sun rays which contribute to plant growth were present in the electric light rays, even to the longer ultra-violet rays.

Scientists Experiment With Monkeys in Seeking Cure for Yellow Fever

New York.—Man's study of yellow fever, the mysterious tropical disease that once took heavy toll in the western hemisphere, has been expedited by the achievements of a little band of scientists now at work in West Africa.

The yellow fever commission of the international health board, Rockefeller foundation, has found an Asiatic monkey, similar to the familiar companion of the organ grinder, that is susceptible to the disease. Working with this primate, the commission has already made several important contributions to knowledge of the fever.

The experts have been able to transmit the virus consistently to the monkey, known as Macacus Rhesus, both by inoculation and by the primary infective agent, the mosquito. It has been found that the serum from recovered cases of yellow fever will protect monkeys against virulent blood, an important discovery because it indicates the possibility of treating human patients in like manner.

Motor Police Seen as Most Efficient

Swampscott, Mass.—The way to efficiency in the small town police department lies through a completely motorized force, says Walter Francis Reeves, chief of the Swampscott police.

Chief Reeves is trying to put his idea into practice here and points out that the town's force has shrunk from twenty-one patrolmen and officers to fifteen men. With the decrease and diminished expenses have come motor equipment, and, the chief asserts, a far more efficient police service.

Reeves believes that every town in the United States should motorize its force.

A criminal, he said, can keep tab on the old-time patrolman, but he cannot tell when the motor-mounted policeman may show up at any given spot. In suburban and thickly settled town districts alike, he says, police are needed who can be summoned at top speed.

Warns Against Buying Seed Corn Carelessly

Washington.—Unless the buyer knows that the seller is reliable and can supply the kind of seed he offers, extreme care should be exercised in purchasing seed corn, the Department of Agriculture warns.

"Unfortunately," it says, "there are likely to be many individuals who will offer to sell crossed seed at a high price when the seed is little more productive, if any, than ordinary seed corn."

The supply of superior crossed seed, the department advises, is comparatively small.

Find Way to Unroll Brittle Manuscript

London.—The aid of ultra-modern chemistry has been invoked to salvage another relic of the remote past.

An ancient leather roll of Egyptian writing had lain unopened for 50 years in the British museum because it was so brittle that no one dared unroll it. Experiments with a broken fragment of the leather in the museum's laboratory, however, finally gave scientists a clew as to how to handle the mysterious manuscript.

Several thin coatings of celluloid were soaked into the pores of the leather, after which it was cemented with strong celluloid on to a piece of celluloid-treated cheesecloth. In this way it was unrolled without a break and pressed flat between two glass plates to dry. It remained perfectly flat after drying and can now be read with ease.

Asquith Town

The name of the late Lord Oxford and Asquith is likely to live not only in history but in geography, for two far-sundered places on the map were named in his honor during his long premiership.

The first such honor was paid him by Sir Ernest Shackleton, who named a newly discovered peak in the vicinity of the South Pole Mount Asquith.

The second was the bestowal of his name on Asquith Town, near Regina, Canada, which is said to be the exact geographical center of the British empire.

MENLO PARK

Death of Mrs. Bruce

Mrs. James Douglas Bruce, a Menlo Park pioneer, passed to her final rest Tuesday morning, following a lingering illness at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. L. Frederics on Oak Grove avenue. Owing to her failing health, the members of her family were with her when the final summons came.

Mrs. Bruce was born in Scotland seventy years ago. She was highly educated and a refined woman who made many friends by her gentleness and charming manner. For forty years she had resided in the community living quietly and unostentatiously, giving her family all her attention and aid. Her husband, the late James D. Bruce, was an expert stone mason. When the Stanford University was in course of erection he assisted in doing the stone work and was employed for years on the massive buildings. He was a university graduate. Mrs. Bruce was a kindly woman beloved by all, who came in daily contact with her. To know her was to love her and like her.

Mrs. Bruce leaves a sister, Mrs. Andrew McDonnell of San Carlos, four daughters, Miss Beatrice Morton Bruce and Mrs. M. L. Frederick of Menlo Park, Mrs. J. Edward Latham of San Mateo, Mrs. Guy Manson of Fresno and a son, James Bruce of Menlo Park.

The Rev. Ralph Smith of Trinity Episcopal church, Menlo Park, will conduct the funeral services this morning at 10 o'clock at Roller and Hapgood's chapel. Interment will be at Cypress Lawn, where Rev. Hugh Montgonmery former pastor of the Menlo Park Episcopal church will read the services.

To Represent Menlo Parlor

Samuel M. Shortridge, Jr., will depart shortly for Redding, where he will represent Menlo Parlor, N. S. G. W. No. 185 as a delegate His many friends throughout the state are grooming him for grand trustee and it is believed he will make the hurdle in the race for this office.

Succumbs to Long Illness

After a prolonged illness, Dorothy Bearce, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Bearce, passed away Sunday morning and was interred in Alta Mesa cemetery after services in the Presbyterian church on Tuesday afternoon. The little girl was born at Morgan Hill but spent several years of her life in Menlo Park. Dorothy was a sweet and loving child, the idol of her family and admired by all for her gentleness and beauty of character. Like a budding flower the perfume of her kindly disposition radiated, bringing gladness and charm to all with whom she came in contact. Mr. and Mrs. Bearce have the sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

You Are Urged to Vote Tuesday

The Menlo Park Hoover-for President Club urges all to vote at the primary election next Tuesday. Everyone should go to the polls and cast his or her ballot for California's favorite son. Menlo Park should give Hoover a one hundred per cent vote. This community is his home and his home town should give him big support. It looks at this time, that he will be the Republican standard bearer for the presidency.

Work Goes On Steadily

The work of improving Holy Cross cemetery goes steadily on, but funds are needed and therefore all those having relatives buried in that burial place are requested to respond promptly with their remittance.

One by one the old landmarks are being removed to make way for modern imrpovements. Commercialism has no sentiment. Progress cannot be impeded by feeling of any nature. The old John Maloney home in town is the latest to succumb and go the way other land marks have gone. The Maloney home was erected by the late John Maloney sixty years ago. Here the entire family of eight children were born and grew up and spent happy days around the spacious grounds. The dwelling is being wrecked and the lumber hauled away. In its place will be erected a modern building to take care of the vast business of the Menlo Feed and Fuel Company.

Around the old domicile there lingers many hallowed associations. In other days happy gatherings of old pioneers took place there and enjoyed the hospitality of the owner. Mrs. Derry, formerly Katherine Maloney, who was born in the old structure, with her family, has moved to her new home on the highway near the Leon Douglas home.

"Starting Something"

A play, "Starting Something," will be staged at the school house Thursday evening, May 3rd. by the Menlo P.-T. A. A special feaure o fthe program will be several songs by Thomas Glynn, well-known radio artist.

Education Week Program

Public Schools Week, a statewide observance, will be recognized here by a program in the school building on the highway Saturday evening. The program arranged for will consist of three selections by the school orchestra, vocal selections by Mrs. Avery J. Howe of Palo Alto, a recitation by one of the boys of the school, a short talk by the newly elected trustee, Frank Johnson, and the principal address by Professor A. C. Argo, superintendent of Sequoia Union High School.

Public School Week was sponsored several years ago by the Grand Lodge of Masons in California, but has now grown to be a public event. The purpose of these meetings is to interest parents and all persons interested in the progress and development of the public school system and to encourage a closer and more helpful contact between the parents and teachers.

One of the largest items in the expense budget in the State of California is that of education and it is particularly desired to secure the attendance of taxpayers, who will learn more regarding the school activities on which this money is being spent.

Dedicate Two Trees

Menlo Parlor N. S. G. W. dedicated two trees at the Fremont School last Sunday afternoon with impressive ceremony. The Boy Scouts escorted the children to the building, where a program was rendered. The speech of the day was delivered by W. D. Elfrink, the eloquent lecturer at Menalto Park. He spoke of the significance of the occasion, telling how the sapling would take root and grow to be mammoth trees, with wide-spreading branches, underneath which little ones yet unborn would come to enjoy their cooling shades and where feathered songsters would be lured to build their nests and rear their young and sing their sweetest songs in spring time, thus gladdening the hearts and inspiring the scholars and teachers at the Fremont school in the years to come. Mr. Elfrink spoke briefly but very eloquently, getting much applause as he closed.

School Trustee F. W. Johnson then presented a large flag to the school, which was accepted by the principal, Miss Kirby in a neat address. The school stands on hallowed ground. Nearby is El Camino Real over which Junipero Serra traveled weekly from the Santa Clara Mission to Mission Dolores in San Francisco in 1778. The Stanford home, where the senator and his devoted wife spent many days of their declining years, cast its shawdows over the school building while in the not far distance looms the famous Stanford University, rivalling Yale and Harvard in greatness and achievements and which is shortly to receive added glory in having a former student, Herbert Hoover, president of the United States.

Over the Fremont playgrounds, forty thousand soldiers trod in their work of training for overseas duty during the World war. These soldiers, when the evening of life shall have come, they will wonder back to view the scenes of their youthful ardor in preparing for the battle fields of Europe in defense of the flag. The spot is sacred. It is hallowed and around it memory will linger for ages.

WOODSIDE

Mrs. Prentis Cob Hale entertained about twenty of her friends at a picnic at her Woodside place. The guest of honor was Mrs. Dent Robert who recently arrived from the South, and after a week's stay in San Francisco, will leave for the east and Europe.

Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Moffitt and family have returned to their Woodside home for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. George Doig of Portola celebrated the first anniversary of their wedding on Sunday last. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Peter Doig, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stewart, Miss Margaret Stewart, Miss Irma McCormack, Miss Margaret Doig, and Peter Doig, Jr.

The ladies of the Parent-Teacher Association have been planning for the May Day celebration to take place at the local school grounds on Tuesday afternoon. Games have been scheduled and prizes provided and refreshments will be served. By a vote of the school, Phyllis Blackington was selected as Queen of the festival and Barbara Neuman, Marion Neuman, Eleanor Meyers and Priscilla Jarvis were selected as the Queen's attendants.

The community party to be given by the P.-T. A. on Saturday evening will be in the nature of a kitchen shower, the price of admission being some useful kitchen utensil. There will be motion pictures, music, dancing and refreshments.

Roger Komesthoeft, a former pupil of the Woodside school, was one of the winners in the high school Shakespearian contest, held at Berkeley a short time ago.

Mrs. Jack Shapiro was taken to the hospital on Tuesday morning, suffering from a very severe affection of poison oak.

Although the season has not officially opened at the Family Farm, many of the members of the club find sufficient attractions at the farm to bring them down over the week ends and the house.

Council All Present

The new council met Tuesday night, all members being present. The petition of R. Buckman for a permit to erect a service station on his property just off the highway on Valparaiso avenue brought forth a lengthy discussion. Mayor Weeden contended that the matter was not properly before the meeting in as much that the required plans and specifications did not accompany the request. Blake averred that Buckman should be given a fair deal and that the request ought to be acted upon. Walker agreed to act as building inspector and pass upon the application. It was finally agreed to act on the petition when Buckman had filed his plans and specifications with the council. A petition signed by 42 property owners in that neighborhood opposed the application and asked that Valparaiso avenue be zoned as a resident district.

W. E. Monroe, secretary of the Menlo Park Merchants' Association, in a lengthy communication, asked the council to revise the license rates so that it would conform to the business done by the merchants. He asked that the businessmen come before the council and discuss the matter. Blake held that the revision of the license ordinance was taken up some time ago by the council. After considerable discussion it was agreed that the members sit with the merchants at the city hall on Friday evening, April 27, when the matter will be adjusted.

The clerk read the applications for city offices that will be filled next Tuesday evening as follows:

Building Inspector, Charles H. Smith.

City Attorney, Frank Lee Crist, a Stanford graduate.

Police Officer or Traffic Officer, P. K. Seelve, H. S. Huesties, F. J. Adams, Frank Love.

City Judge: J. E. Strong, E. J. McLaughlin, E. P. Clough, W. E. Monroe, L. H. Cook and W. L. Roer promised to serve for one dollar a month.

Mayor Weeden of the finance commission reported that the amount of funds on hand was $888.90, disbursements to be made $379.78, leaving a balance of $509.12. The mayor stated that the amount to be received from the county in taxes was $1,018.19 to this would be added the licenses of $900, maing a total of $1918.19, which would be all the funds available until December.

An ordinance fixing the compensation and bod of the chief of police and abolishing a former ordinance was introduced. A tax ordinance was also introduced, whereby the county is to collect the taxes and make the assessment of the city. An ordinance was read establishing bulletin boards to post all ordinances instead of publishing the same.

Before adjourning the council adopted resolutions of condolence to be sent to family of Mrs. James Bruce, who died Tuesday morning last. The council will meet in regular session on next Tuesday evening.
